GOLDEN STATE VOTE HARMFUL TO ROOSEVELT

Likelihood of Deadlocked Convention Called Increasing.

GARNER'S LEAD GOES BEYOND 45,000 TOTAL

Greater Demand for Elimination of Both Governor and Smith Expected.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

California, which robbed Charles Evans Hughes of the Presidency in 1916, has now dealt a severe, maybe a fatal blow, to the presidential candidacy of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

So confident of victory were the Roosevelt people that the actual outcome of the Democratic primary in the Golden State must be regarded as a real political upset.

John N. Garner	211,913
Alfred E. Smith	135,981

Backers Concede Damage.

The California primary caused more excitement, more surprise and more speculation at the Capitol than any other contest in the 1932 campaign.

That the outcome had damaged Roosevelt's chances was generally conceded. Even the Roosevelt men conceded it. The only point on which politicians differed was as to the degree of the damage.

Roosevelt supporters, while admitting that "another chock" had been placed under the Roosevelt bandwagon, predicted that the bandwagon ultimately would get under way again and be first across the line.

The anti-Roosevelt people, recalling what happened a week before in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, sarcastically remarked that, in crossing the Rocky Mountains, the bandwagon had lost a wheel and consequently was wrecked.

Deadlock More Probable.

On these points, there was fairly general agreement:

First, that there is now more likelihood of a deadlocked convention and a free-for-all fight for the nomination, with a compromise candidate winning out in the end.

Second, that Speaker Garner, whether he is nominated or not, will, with California's 44 and Texas' 46 delegates, be a power at the convention.

Third, that henceforth there will be an increasing clamor for the elimination of both Roosevelt and Smith in the interest of party harmony.

When Roosevelt won the New Hampshire primary back in March, much importance was attached to the "psychological value" of his victory. Undoubtedly that victory started a stampede in the governor's

Member of House Is Injured by Auto

(Associated Press.)

Representative Willis C. Hawley, of Oregon, was stunned and badly bruised about the head and chest yesterday when run down by an automobile driven by an unidentified woman.

After the accident, which happened in front of the House Office Building as he was on his way to the Capitol, he was rushed to his office, where he was examined by Dr. George W. Calver, House physician.

Although no bones were broken, he was unable to walk and was ordered home to recuperate. Mr. Hawley said he did not realize the extent of his injuries at first and when the woman driver asked if he was badly hurt, waved her to drive on.

Money Troubles Hinted In Egan's Disappearance

San Francisco, May 4 (A.P.).—Possibility financial troubles were a factor leading to the mysterious disappearance of Frank J. Egan, San Francisco's public defender, was being investigated by police tonight.

Authorities said they had discovered Egan was facing a foreclosure suit against his home and had lost money in financial ventures before he dropped out of sight Monday.

Forged Stock Plot Is Bared In 4 Arrests

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—A counterfeiting gang that planned to flood the East, police said, with more than $2,000,000 worth of spurious stock certificates was smashed in a raid on a West Fifty-third street loft building today.

Four men found working in the place were arrested. Police intimated the arrest of several "front men," who assertedly were planning to obtain bank loans on the worthless stock, would follow shortly.

All the certificates seized were counterfeits of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. common stock. There were 50 completed 100-share certificates and 600 partly finished certificates.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney pronounced the completed certificates excellent imitations. The only flaw, he said, was in the watermark, which was faintly printed on the surface of the paper instead of being embedded in the paper itself.

The printing paraphernalia included two special presses, a quantity of varicolored inks, five plates and other accessories.

The raid climaxed three months of detective work, during which the four men constantly were shadowed.

CENSORSHIP GROWS IN LINDBERGH HUNT

Norfolk Naval Base Hides Work of Curtis Aboard Contact Yacht.

Norfolk, Va., May 4 (A.P.).—Efforts of John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk boatbuilder, to complete eight weeks of work as a negotiator in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, continued to be concentrated tonight in maneuvers with the yacht Marcon.

A strict censorship on any information concerning the movements of the boat is maintained by officials at the naval base which is serving as the base of operations for the Marcon on its various "contact" cruises. Another trip was believed to have been made today following the return of the yacht last night from a trip out to sea.

Mr. Curtis and other participants in these cruises presumably are remaining at the naval base between trips in readiness to board the boat on short notice. Outsiders are barred from the entire naval base area during the night, while during the day marine guards are thrown about the section where the Marcon has its berth.

Weather described as ideal for sailing prevailed today. On other trips

Russia Refuses League Body Manchurian Data

Moscow, May 4 (A.P.).—Russia has refused to let Soviet officials in Manchuria give information to the League of Nations Commission looking into Sino-Japanese difficulties, it became known today.

Lord Lytton, chairman of the commission, had asked Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian foreign minister, for such assistance, and was told the request could not be met.

SENATE GROUP VOTES TARIFFS INTO TAX BILL

BOTH PARTIES RAP REVISED MEASURE

Corporation Rate Is Boosted and Jewelry Charge Is Dropped.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

The Senate finance committee continued in its quick-change role in considering the tax bill yesterday and at the end of a hectic and often sharp session had a revised bill which apparently pleased none and brought sarcastic public denunciations from Republican and Democratic members alike.

Embargo tariffs on lumber, coal, oil, gasoline and copper were put into the bill by close votes.

The committee tossed into the discard the estimate of House leaders that the business of the country would have returned near enough to normal in two years to make the heavy special excise taxes unnecessary longer than that. The House provision ending the taxes on July 1, 1934, was eliminated. This means that the committee decided the excise taxes and the increased postal rates shall continue in effect until repealed.

Corporation Tax Boosted.

Out of their defeat over the tariffs, opponents wrung a vote which put back into the measure the 1½ per cent penalty on consolidated tax returns, filed by corporations. This premium had been put in the bill by the House. The finance committee struck it out, but increased the corporation tax rate over the House rate to 14 per cent. Under the action yesterday consolidated returns will bear a rate of 15½ per cent.

Various other tax rates which had been increased by the committee were reduced or changed. The 10 per cent tax was eliminated entirely.

How near the much-changed bill would come to producing the revenue required to balance the Federal budget was a matter of conjecture at the end of the day. Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, estimated it was about $300,000,000 short. Other members had other estimates or refused to venture a figure. Treasury experts who have sat in with the committee to supply figures as changes were made, figuratively tossed up their hands.

Capone Begins 11-Year Term In Penitentiary at Atlanta

Gang Chieftain Is Greeted by Shouts From Inmates as He Enters Prison; Shows Little Emotion on Starting Sentence for Tax Evasion.

Atlanta, May 4 (A.P.).—The big steel gates of the Atlanta Federal Prison clanged shut tonight behind "Scarface Al" Capone and public enemy No. 1 became convict No. 40886.

At 7:09 p. m., Central standard time, the Chicago gang boss began serving his eleven-year sentence for evading income taxes, a sentence that was expected to break up his domination of Chicago's underworld and his far-reaching power in other cities as well.

Capone's notoriety followed him to the very doors of his exile. He left the train that had brought him from prison in the glare of flashlights and as he walked up the steps of the penitentiary the convicts in one wing broke out in a cry that sounded half cheer and half hoot.

United States Marshal H. C. W. Laubenheimer, of Chicago, delivered his burly prisoner to Warden A. C. Aderhold and came out heaving a sigh of relief. The "big fellow" was off his hands and in prison at last.

Usual prison routine was followed to the letter. Warden Aderhold asked in formal manner, "What is your name?" The gang chief, known throughout the world as the most notorious of modern criminals, looked slightly surprised and answered, "Alphonse Capone."

In reply to the warden's next question, Capone said his sentence was eleven years. Marshal Laudenheimer corrected him, telling the warden it was ten years in the Federal prison

HALE URGES BIG NAVY TO STAVE OFF WAR

(Associated Press.)

Asserting that war may be forced upon the United States at any time, Chairman Hale of the Senate naval committee yesterday pleaded with the Senate to build the strongest fleet that treaties will allow.

"We must be strong enough to keep out of war," he said.

Opening debate on his bill to authorize the construction of a treaty Navy, he said approval of the measure would "strengthen the hands" of the American delegates to the Geneva Disarmament Conference. He added:

"The passage of this bill will serve notice to the other powers that the United States intends to keep up a proportionate degree of preparedness with the rest of the world, and that if other nations insist on keeping up to the full allowances granted to them by treaties, the United States will do the same."

Standing behind his desk in the middle of the Republican side of the Senate chamber, Mr. Hale called attention to the conflict between China and Japan, and said:

"The treaties in which we have placed such implicit confidence have utterly failed of immediate effect, and with their prestige damaged may not be relied upon with any degree of safety as guarantees against future wars.

"Under existing conditions it is folly not to recognize that little as

Tardieu Seeks Aid Of Herriot's Party

Makes Overtures Designed to Check Swing of Power to Left.

Paris, May 4 (U.P.).—Premier Andre Tardieu attempted tonight to halt the swing of governmental power toward the Left when, in his final election campaign speech, he broadcast a hint that his cabinet would be willing to cooperate with the Radical-Socialist party of Edouard Herriot.

Herriot's party won a commanding position in last Sunday's election. Tardieu's indirect bid strengthened the indications that Herriot will be premier of a powerful figure in the next cabinet, and it was believed that he was swinging toward cooperation with the present Center regime rather than with the Socialists.

Tardieu said that cooperation with Herriot was necessary to save the country from ruin at the hands of a Left Wing cabinet.

"There are many things I never wish to see again," Tardieu said in reference to the disastrous Socialist cabinet of 1924, "and I know Edouard Herriot does not wish to see them either, for we were companions in an effort to repair that damage."

Blast and Fire Destroy 8 Planes and Hangars

Dayton, Ohio, May 4 (A.P.).—An explosion and subsequent fire destroyed eight old model airplanes and a hangar at the United States Army post here tonight. Eight men in the hangar narrowly escaped injury as the blast tore down one of the walls.

Post officials who started an investigation of the fire estimated the damage at $100,000. The cause of the explosion was undetermined.

Hindenburg Edict Hits Reds' Atheistic Groups

Berlin, May 4 (A.P.).—President Paul von Hindenburg ordered the dissolution of atheistic organizations of Communists in Germany today and a governmental check on political associations formed on semimilitary lines.

The government explained that the order against the so-called "Godless" organizations of Communists was intended to spike a Communist attempt to prepare for the proletarian revolution by undermining Christian culture.

FIGHTS NEAR HARBIN CLAIM HEAVY TOLL

Many Slain as Rebel Chinese Hold Off Three Brigades of Japanese.

Harbin, Manchuria, May 4 (A.P.).—Chinese irregulars and Japanese troops clashed in heavy fighting today in the Tsitsihar area of Heilungkiang province, where almost a year ago the military campaigns in Manchuria had their start.

As in the first fighting of last September the rebel Chinese were using hide-and-seek tactics to great advantage against the Japanese heavier war machinery, and were reported to be holding off their Japanese brigades under Gen. Hirose.

Many killed and wounded were reported in clashes along the Hulan-Hailun railway between 50 and 100 miles north of Harbin, and about the same distance east of Tsitsihar.

The former followers of Gen. Mah

Churchmen Begin Coal Fields Study

Group From New York Is Given Freedom of Area by Officials.

Pineville, Ky., May 4 (A.P.).—Four Eastern clergymen arrived here this afternoon for a preliminary survey of conditions in the southeastern Kentucky coal fields from which several delegations of students recently were ejected.

In the party were the Rev. William B Spofford, editor of the Witness, an Episcopal weekly; the Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr, the Rev. C. Rankin Barnes and the Rev. Cameron P. Hall. A fifth member of the committee, the Rev. Allan Knight Chalmers, did not make the trip.

The ministers said they will return to New York Friday. They conferred for an hour with County Attorney Walter B. Smith and other officials and were told to come and go as they pleased. The Rev. Mr. Spofford said the delegation proposed to get general outline of conditions and report back to the committee of 21 New York pastors who recently appealed for a Senate investigation of the coal fields.

CASTLE COMMENDS "HOOVER DOCTRINE"

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The modern development in American foreign policy was presented last night in a new and luminous fashion by Acting Secretary of State William R. Castle, jr., speaking before the American Conference on International Justice here. The speech was the high point of the exercises at the Chamber of Commerce Building.

The Acting Secretary of State analyzed the portent of the "Hoover doctrine," which declared that territorial gains made by infraction of the Kellogg pact will not be recognized, and then declared:

"This doctrine puts teeth in the pact but involves no war to prevent war, no danger of war arising out of boycotts. It keeps this country clear of entanglements while at the same time it proves our willingness to cooperate with others in making the world a safe place in which to live."

The speech of the Acting Secretary was significant for other reasons as well. He also enunciated the doctrine that the United States would not resort to either boycott or embargo, which in the light of present developments in China, is certain to cause profound reaction in the Far East.

No mention, either express or implied, of war debts or reparations was contained in the address, however.

The reference to the League of Nations was also the subject of comment, for in this connection Acting Secretary Castle said:

"I can not foresee any possibility that America will join the league

JUDD TAKES STEP AS JUDGE GIVES 4 TERMS OF 10 YEARS

Commutes Sentence in Unprecedented Move and Prisoners Are at Liberty First Time Since January.

RETRIAL OF 4 HALF-CASTES IN ATTACK IS HELD UNLIKELY

Lieutenant Hugs Wife Amid Hysterical Laughter; Darrow to Attempt to Gain Complete Pardon for Americans.

Honolulu, T. H., May 4 (U.P.).—Four Americans convicted of manslaughter in the honor slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, an island half-caste, today were sentenced to ten years imprisonment, but had their sentences immediately commuted to one hour in the custody of the sheriff.

Gov. Lawrence M. Judd, who took this unexpected, unprecedented action, said it was, in effect, a pardon, since the accused were not committed to the Territory Penitentiary at Oahu.

The convicted, Lieut. Thomas Hedges Massie, young naval officer; Mrs. Grace Hubbard Fortescue, prominent socially in Washington, D. C., and A. O. Jones and E. J. Lord, enlisted seamen, remained with the sheriff the prescribed time and then walked joyously to freedom.

With them during their one-hour detention was Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, wife of Lieut. Massie and daughter of Mrs. Fortescut. It was a brutal assault on her by five men that led to the death of Kahahawai, the asserted leader.

"I hope this will settle this particular case for good," said Gov. Judd in announcing the commutations. The announcement was first made secretly in a conference Gov. Judd held with Clarence Darrow, 75-year-old veteran of the courtrooms, who was chief of the defense, and Prosecutor John Kelley.

It was understood a member of President Hoover's Cabinet contacted Gov. Judd from Washington last night. It was pointed out that any suggestion from such a high source would carry considerable weight since the governor is appointed by the President.

The defendants obviously knew of developments as they went before Judge Charles Davis, who presided at their trial.

Maximum Penalty.

He called them one by one, first Jones and Lord, the smiling seamen; then grim Lieut. Massie and finally patrician Mrs. Fortescue, and sentenced them to 10 years' imprisonment, the maximum penalty for manslaughter.

Courtroom spectators were marveling at the calmness of the four when Prosecutor Kelley suddenly announced that commutations would be forthcoming immediately.

The defendants had been with the sheriff the prescribed hour when Gov. Judd's order to free them arrived.

Testimony by Mrs. Thalia Massie was the high mark of the case. She told how Kahahawai and four accomplices attacked her criminally and beat her last September. Lieut. Massie then took up the story under Darrow's guidance, saying that he and his associates kidnaped Kahahawai in hope of obtaining a confession from him.

Massie said he held a gun and that everything "went blank" after he heard Kahahawai admit the attack. Darrow pleaded insanity as the defense for all four. Prosecutor Kelley urged the jury to find them guilty of second-degree murder.

Hysterical laughter rang through the ancient courtroom when the governor's order was received. Sailors

PARDON ADVOCATES RAP COMMUTATION

(Associated Press.)

Even an hour in prison custody was looked upon yesterday by congressional advocates of a pardon as too long for the four Americans in the Joseph Kahahawai slaying case in Honolulu.

Disappointment that they were not pardoned mingled with condemnation and praise of the commutation by Gov. Lawrence M. Judd of their ten-year sentence for manslaughter.

Meanwhile the question of whether Lieut. Thomas H. Massie will continue in the naval service apparently rested solely with President Hoover.

Naval regulations authorize the President to drop any officer found guilty of any offense by civil authorities and sentenced to imprisonment.

The general opinion among naval officers was that President Hoover would not exercise his authority to cut Massie off the rolls.

A "confession" the four did not get a fair trial was read in the commutation by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, sponsor of a bill for a congressional pardon.

McKellar said he also felt that "the St. Paul, Minn., May 4 (A.P.).—William Mahoney, labor-indorsed candidate, was elected Mayor of St. Paul yesterday in an election that brought out the heaviest vote in the city's history.

25,000 Witness Crowning Of Apple Festival Queen

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., May 4.—With a member of the "House of Washington" enthroned as queen of the ninth Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, upward of 25,000 people today cast aside the cares and worries of the world to glorify again the blossoming of 11,000,000 apple trees in the Shenandoah-Potomac-Cumberland apple belt and at the same time honor the sovereign's forbear, George Washington.

With ideal spring weather prevailing, the throng at the first day of the fete once again acclaimed the general theme of the festival that "the bounties of nature are the gift of God."

The festival reached its greatest height with the coronation of Miss Helen Ames Washington, of Overbrook, Pa., as Queen Shenandoah IX this afternoon on the esplanade of Handley High School, while 10,000 visitors shouted "Long live the queen." Ambassador Claude Claudel, the representative of the French nation, which aided Washington in the acquisition of American independence, journeyed here from Washington, D. C., by motor especially to place the time-honored crown of diadems on the Pennsylvania maiden of 18 years.

Preceding the royal procession, trumpeters from Shenandoah Valley Academy, of Winchester, appeared on the large dais where the throne was located and blew several blasts. A chorus from the Harrisonburg State

SENATE JOINS FIGHT TO CURB ECONOMIES

Move Made to Halt Slashes in Postoffice-Treasury Supply Bill Funds.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

The congressional economy about-face yesterday spread to the Senate, where a movement gained ground to rescind or materially modify 10 per cent cuts in the Postoffice-Treasury supply bill.

Senator Tasker L. Oddie (Republican), Nevada, moved for the outright repeal of the McKellar 10 per cent slashes so far as concerns the Postoffice-Treasury measure. More than 60,000 jobs are at stake if the cuts go through.

Meanwhile the mutilated economy rider to the House legislative supply bill was delivered into the hands of Senate Appropriations Chairman Wesley L. Jones, who will delay hearings several days.

At the same time notice was served that the House will proceed more slowly in approval of Senate appropriation cuts. Unlike the Interior Department appropriation bill, which was rushed through the House unaltered from the form it left the Senate, the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor supply bill will be referred today to conferees.

A parting statement was flung after the emasculated omnibus retrenchment bill by Economy Chairman John McDuffie. More than $165,000,000 in economies stricken from the bill was blamed on the administration's insistence that the savings all be "thrown together in one bill."

The Senate economy debate grew out of a resolution introduced Tuesday by Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut. It called on the appropriations committee not to cut customs and postal services to a point that would seriously disrupt those agencies.

The resolution did not go far enough to suit Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, former Treasury Secretary. He offered an amendment instructing the committee not to make cuts requiring widespread dismissals "proposed by the heads of the two departments."

Earlier Senator Oddie, who as chairman of the Postoffice-Treasury appropriations subcommitteee, consistently opposed additional reductions, offered his resolution to stop further slashes. Under the rules, the resolution must at least lie over a day.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Republican), California, who bitterly fought Interior Department reductions hitting Boulder Dam construction, suggested the Senate might go farther still and reconsider reductions in bills already approved. Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), Utah, agreed the cuts might work more hardship on bills that have passed than others to follow.

McKellar Backs Program.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, insisted, the cuts would not "disrupt the services in any way;" Senator Bingham said reductions should be made in construction activities now exempted; Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, assailed postal "subsidies" paid airplane and shipping companies; and Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, favored eliminating "useless" Government personnel.

Announcement that State, Justice, Commerce and Labor supplies will go to conference was made by Speaker Garner, who said House Appropriations Chairman Byrns told him "some adjustment" was necessary.

Representative Byrns said leaders objected to some changes made in the House bill by the Senate, one in particular, providing $200,000 for the establishment of an air mail line from Minneapolis and St. Paul to Seattle.

Omnibus Set-Up Blamed.

Speaker Garner said the 10 per cent cut probably would be retained if the provision allowing a 15 per cent interchange in appropriations within a department is kept in the bill.

Blaming the "omnibus" set-up for the failure of his economy program, Representative McDuffie yesterday said:

"I warned the President against the very results that were obtained, suggesting, in view of the many controversial items in the bill, the possibility of a coalition of those opposed to various items, which would endanger if not destroy the entire program."

Asserting he had no criticism for any member of the House, Mr. McDuffie, nevertheless, added:

"Although the people of the country are demanding a reduction in governmental costs, at the same time they, aided and spurred on by organized minorities and bureaucrats, appear to be insisting upon the maintenance of this gigantic and expensive central government at Washington. If they insist upon what might be termed 'luxuries' in government, they must pay the bills, which means additional tax burdens."

Whistling Held Arch Foe Of Mental Achievement

By JOHN J. DALY

WHISTLING is the archenemy of thought. This can be proved any place whistlers perform—on buses, street cars, in offices, studies or the public streets.

The finest poem a poet ever dreamed may be knocked completely out of his head by some violent whistler outside a casement window.

Only when people are carefree and happy do they whistle. When they are whistling they are certainly not concerned with the serious problems of life. So they go their merry way, whistling, forgetting that others exist; that they are not in the same mood with the whistlers. Whatever the mood of the others, immediately they become irritable at the approach of a whistler, rolling high Cs, trilling through pursed lips. So that while one person is in a happy frame of mind, whistling, another has murder in his heart—and the wonder is that more whistlers aren't choked to death.

Strange, too, that whistling should come from the head—where Reason is supposed to sit serenely on her throne, the head usually being less emotional than the heart.

IT IS accounted for in this way: In the skull of a whistler there is a sounding board, even when the head itself is not sound. In fact, were it a solid, substantial head, without vacuum, an empty space, there could be no whistling. Whistling should be left where nature intended it to be—in the throats of birds, canary and mocking, and the whippoorwill.

A whistler—if he be a man—should have a pipe stuck between his teeth to break up the habit, or a cigar in his mouth, or a dainty cigarette dangling on his lips. Then, if he started to whistle he would choke on the smoke—and right good riddance, too, say all those who have been annoyed by the whistlers.

Whistling must be a mania of some sort. At least it has a tendency to make maniacs out of those who are forced, against their will, to listen to it, especially when there is work to be done—mental labor. A bricklayer or a carpenter, or even a plumber as he goes a-plumbing, can tolerate whistling. Why? Because, as bricks are laid and hammers swung, hitting nails on the head, and pipes are piped, whistling reminds these artisans that soon the most melodious of all whistles will blow—the signal to knock off work, throw down the tools.

FAMOUS whistlers are few. To top them all, there was Whistler, who was really an etcher; and Whistling Rufus, a mythical character of song and story from 'Way Down South—Whistling Rufus, the One-Man Band.

The best combinations, though, are the whistlers and the whittlers, the whittlers sitting in the sun whistling and the whistlers by their side whittling—whistling before the wind to keep away the Bugaboo Man.

SENATE COMMITTEE VOTES TARIFFS INTO TAX MEASURE

committee the prospective revenue total has been as quicksilver and the experts told the committee they could not possibly prepare an accurate estimate over night, but would try to have one ready some time today. In consequence the committee will not meet until this afternoon.

It is possible that when it does get together again all of the work which has been done so far will be tossed aside and a new measure written. Senator Reed has announced that he would seek a vote today on his plan to substitute for the excise taxes a general manufacturers' sales tax, guarded against pyramiding and from which food and clothing would be exempted.

When the committee adjourned in a welter late in the afternoon it had before it a motion by Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, to substitute the entire program proposed to the committee by Secretary of the Treasury Odgen L. Mills for the revised House bill. Adjournment was taken to avoid a vote on that motion.

Senator Bingham's motion was made as a sort of an emergency lifesaver for the Republicans. Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, caught them unaware by moving to strike out all of the House bill except the income, corporation, gift and inheritance tax and the administrative sections. He proposed to substitute for the taxes stricken out the Treasury program. Rejection of the Walsh motion by the Republicans would have meant a slap at the Treasury tax program. Its adoption would have meant that the tariff advocates would be left out of the bill. So would the Bingham substitute which is not expected to prove palatable to the Democrats and it can be rejected by both Democratic and Republican votes.

Despite the warmth of the battle, Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), of Utah, chairman; Senator James E. Watson (Republican), of Indiana, majority leader, and Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, ranking minority member of the committee, and others predicted the committee would conclude consideration of the bill this afternoon. Senator Smoot said that if additional revenue was found to be needed it would be written into the bill without delay.

The bill was virtually completed yesterday in a strange atmosphere. Senators other than committee members attended the executive sessions from time to time to urge this or that change. Outside the committee room the corridor was crowded with newspaper reporters and lobbyists and representatives of various interests and businesses affected by the provisions of the bill. Some of these representatives were persons of political importance in their States and members of the committee at times left the meeting room to confer with them or give them up-to-the-minute advice on committee actions.

Members Criticize Work.

Tired and showing the strain of the fights, members were frank in criticizing their handiwork.

"This bill has been considered with a flippancy and recklessness beyond belief," Senator Reed said. "There has been no apparent policy controlling decisions. There has been no recognition of the seriousness of what we are doing and its effect on the business of the country. The committee has vacillated from day to day, so that no business man could know what the decision of the committee or of Congress was likely to be. At a time when the country is entitled to the best thought in us we are giving it the worst."

"It is an outlaw tax bill, and you can say that publicly for me," Senator Walsh said.

"The changes voted today make the bill indefensible, unjustifiable, and those who had it in charge must take the responsibility of it," Senator Harrison said. "The session of the committee today was the most ridiculous performance I ever saw in my life. In order to get enough votes to approve the tariff on coal they had to have five different votes, with various changes, until they finally got enough votes to get it in.

"The committee has thrown the bill wide open to a tariff fight which may well endanger its passage.

"If there ever was a time when the President should speak out and demand that the Senate go through with the job of passing a tax bill to balance the budget and do it promptly, it is now."

Senator Watson was more kindly in what he said. "When the finishing touches are put on, I think we will have a better bill than the House measure," he said.

But privately Republican leaders were not so pleased with the situation.

Senator Wesley Jones (Republican), of Washington, signalled the opening of the successful assault of the tariff advocates when he proposed to put in the bill a tariff of $3 per 1,000 feet on lumber imports. His motion was carried by a vote of 11 to 8. Senators Couzens, Keyes and Jesse Metcalf, of Rhode Island, Republicans, swung over to the tariff column and voted for lumber. Other Republicans voting for it were Senators Smoot, Watson, Reed, Samuel Shortridge, of California; Bingham, John Thomas, of Idaho, and Jones.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, advocate of oil tariffs, voted for the tariff on lumber and all other tariff proposals. Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican), of Wisconsin, voted against the lumber and all other tariff proposals. Democrats who voted against the lumber proposal were Senators Harrison, William H. King, of Utah; Walter F. George, of Georgia; Walsh, Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; Edward P. Costigan, of Colorado, and Cordell Hull, of Tennessee.

Duty on Copper.

Copper was given a duty of 4 cents a pound by a vote of 12 to 8. The vote was: For, Republicans, Smoot, Watson, Reed, Shortridge, Cozens, Keyes, Bingham, Thomas, Jones and Metcalf; Democrats, King and Connally. Against, Senators La Follette, Republican, and Democrats, Harrison, George, Walsh, Barkley, Gore, Costigan and Hull.

The House oil tariff was reduced from 1 cent to ½ cent a gallon after much maneuvering and various oil proposals had been voted down. The proposition finally approved included also a tariff of 2½ cents a gallon on gasoline, 2 cents a gallon on lubricating oil, 1 cent a pound on petroleum and paraffin wax products, and 10 cents a 100 pounds on asphalt and bitumin.

This won by one vote, ten to nine. Republicans voting for—Smoot, Watson, Reed, Shortridge, Bingham, Thomas, Jones and Metcalf; Democrats—Donnally and Gore. Against: Republicans—Cousens, Keyes and La Follette; Democrats—Harrison, King, George, Walsh, Costigan and Hull.

The coal tariff of $2 a short ton was put in by a vote of 11 to 8. For: Republicans—Smoot, Watson, Reed, Shortridge, Bingham, Thomas, Jones and Metcalf; Democrats—Barkley, Connally and Gore. Against: Republicans—Couzens and La Follette; Democrats—Harrison, King, George, Walsh, Costigan and Hull.

Other Changes Voted.

Other changes voted by the committee included: Made the 2-cent bank checks tax applicable to all bank checks, estimated to raise, $95,000,000; exempted stock loans from transfer tax, estimated loss, $5,000,000; changing the bond transfer tax to a straight 4 cents per $100 face value instead of the House tax of 2 cents with a minimum of one-eighth of 1 per cent.

Reduced the tax on grape concentrates from 44 to 20 cents a gallon; reduced the tax on grape juice from 11 to 5 cents a gallon; removed the special 10 per cent tax on pistols and revolvers, leaving these subject to the 10 per cent tax in existing law; reduced the tax on pipe lines from 8 to 3 per cent of the carrying charge, but including gasoline and other petroleum products; reduced the tax on fountain sirups from 9 to 7 cents a gallon; increased the admission tax on dog race tracks to 2½ per cent.

Newspaper Leader Hits Increase in Mail Rates

Syracuse, N. Y., May 4 (A.P.).—Jerome D. Barnard, chairman of the postal committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said today the Senate finance committee's increase in second class mail rates had been made without giving publishers an opportunity to be heard.

"Every person familiar with the Postoffice Department's history over the last fifteen years," he said, "knows that the 1921 rates on second class mail when put into effect instead of increasing the revenues in the department actually brought about a decrease.

"The American Newspaper Publishers Association has not sought any special favor from Congress during its consideration of tax legislation. However, it does not approve or believe in a policy that would actually reduce the Government's revenues instead of increasing them.

"Yet the committee proposes an advance to rates which have been tried and proven confiscatory and an absolute failure. The former rates were repealed by Congress for those two reasons."

TAXPAYERS UNION URGES ECONOMIES

Open Letter Sent Congress by Group Organized in Budget Emergency.

Organized to meet the emergency created by congressional handling of the problem of balancing the budget, the Taxpayers Union is furthering the mobilization of taxpayers to urge economy by the National Government and more general distribution of the burden of taxation.

The organization made its debut yesterday in an open letter to Congress entitled "Taxes and the National Survival." The letter was published in morning newspapers.

Drastic reduction of national expenditure by the discontinuance or curtailment of superfluous and paternalistic bureaus, boards and commissions established since the war is demanded by the Taxpayers Union, which also intimates that certain of the major departments of Government might be deserving of reduction.

The group vigorously opposes any further increase of surtaxes on incomes, inheritances and corporations. It claims such increases would depress the market on all taxable stocks and bonds and demoralize industry by the flight of capital from productive industry to "tax exempts."

A general sales tax is offered by the union as the only solution to the Nation's present budget problem. It is pointed out that whereas such a tax at 2¼ per cent might easily be made to yield $1,000,000,000, the burden on every individual would be very light.

SOUGHT

DR. E. G. BAUERSFELD.

BETHESDA DOCTOR OBJECT OF SEARCH

Dr. Emil G. Bauersfeld Has Been Missing From Home Since April 26.

New York police have been asked to assist in the search for Dr. Emil G. Bauersfeld, Bethesda physician, who disappeared from his home about 10 days ago. The physician had shown considerable interest in the radio program entitled "Lost Souls," broadcast weekly from a New York station, and had told friends that he would like to go to New York and visit the Bowery.

The doctor's disappearance was reported to Sergt. Earl H. Burdine at the Bethesda substation of Montgomery County Police yesterday by his wife, who had not reported it previously fearing it would injure his practice. Mrs. Bauersfeld told police that her husband left home between the hours of 2 and 6 a. m. April 26 in a highly nervous condition and that he had threatened suicide.

Dr. Bauersfeld had about $100 with him when he disappeared, but left his automobile at home. His wife had sat up with him because he was unable to sleep due to his nervous state. He suddenly rose and left the house, Mrs. Bauersfeld said, and walked rapidly away.

Mrs. Bauersfeld recently filed suit for divorce in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, but later withdrew the suit and the pair were reunited. They have six children. Mrs. Bauersfeld is prominent in parent-teacher association activities, being the unopposed candidate for president of the local group. The doctor also is well known and liked in Bethesda and the county.

He formerly was associated with Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, former president of the Montgomery County Commissioners, in his medical practice, but recently started his own practice. He attended most of the accident cases near Bethesda, always cheerfully rising from bed, even at early hours of the morning.

When he left home, the 43-year-old physician wore a brown suit, reddish brown overcoat and gray hat. He is 5 feet 7 inches in height, weighs 134 pounds and has brown eyes and gray hair.

County and Washington police are making a search for him, including woods nearby Bethesda, in the fear that he might have carried out his threat of suicide, but it is believed that he wandered off and may be suffering from amnesia.

Gov. Murray Will Seek Income Tax Law Again

Oklahoma City, May 4 (A.P.).—Gov. William H. Murray goes back to the people again this month in another attempt to obtain a State income tax to suit his own ideas.

He announced today initiative petitions would be circulated May 20 and 21 in an effort to obtain the 127,855 signatures needed to get the tax bill on the ballot at one of this year's elections.

MOTORISTS' PARLEY TALKS SPEED TODAY

Mentors to Begin Two-Day Session With U. S. Car Officials Present.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Official mentors of nearly three-fourths of the Nation's 26,000,000 motorists will convene here today for the two-day meeting of the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators.

The issue which will be the paramount concern of the conference, and one which is of personal interest to every motor car owner, is speed. The fight for a curb upon the destructive force of the automobile operated at high speed will be led, paradoxically, by the man who first advocated abolition of maximum speed limits. He is Robin B. Stoeckel, Connecticut motor vehicle commissioner.

W. A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic of the District of Columbia, will act as host to the visiting motor vehicle administrators, who will represent a majority of the States east of the Mississippi River. The sessions will be held in the Hamilton Hotel. District Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby will welcome the group at 10 o'clock this morning.

The morning session will be devoted to organization, the welcoming address by Gen. Crosby, and a speech by Col. A. B. Barber, director of the national conference on street and highway safety, on uniformity of motor vehicle and traffic laws.

Afternoon Meeting.

The afternoon meeting, following a luncheon at the Willard Hotel at which the motor vehicle administrators will be guests of the American Automobile Association, will find the conference considering the speed and safety legislation proposals.

Mr. Stoeckel will ask the conference to go on record in favor of one or two legislative barriers to high-speed operation and to restrictions on speed advertising by motor car manufacturers. Both plans are an outgrowth of pioneer research conducted by the Connecticut motor vehicle department. One calls for a determination of the safe high speed of a passenger car in relation to its weight. The manufacturer would be prohibited from advertising a speed beyond this State-approved rate.

An alternate course being considered by the Connecticut official is to pledge individual drivers not to exceed the speed fixed as safe for various makes of passenger cars.

State Supervision.

Other motor vehicle administrators, among them Benjamin G. Eynon, of Pennsylvania, and Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, are reported to be ready to ask the conference to consider possible means of State supervision over motor vehicle design.

Among the officials already registered for the conference are: George R. Wellington, Providence, R. I., president of the group; W. A. Van Duzer and M. O. Eldridge, Washington; E. Austin Baughman and D. M. Schroeder, Maryland; Harold G. Hoffman, New Jersey; B. G. Eynon and W. W. Matthews, Pennsylvania; C. J. Mealy and A. W. Kalmeyer, New York; R. B. Stoeckel and H. S. Compo, Connecticut; J. G. Griffin, New Hampshire; J. L. Harris, North Carolina; J. A. Bickell, Ontario; W. D. Denny, Delaware; J. O. Davis and Charles M. McCabe, Tennessee; William Stevens, Iowa; and John Hall, New York, representing the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

A number of other State officials and representatives of the automobile and insurance industries are expected to register before the opening session this morning.

Racketeers Try to Get $50,000 From Edsion

Philadelphia, May 4 (A.P.).—The Record says Philadelphia racketeers have attempted to extort money from William L. Edison, of Wilmington, Del., son of the late Thomas A. Edison, in connection with his marketing of a device to eliminate radio static which he invented.

The racketeers are reported to have demanded $50,000 from Mr. Edison as the price of his freedom to market unmolested the device. Mr. Edison refused to comment on the report, but admitted he had conferred with police officials here Monday. Police also declined to comment.

MASSIE DEFENDANTS FREED AFTER THEY SERVE ONE HOUR

Lord and Jones slapped each other on the backs.

Lieut. Massie hugged his wife, who suddenly seemed to have lost years in appearance. The aristocratic Mrs. Fortescue embraced her daughter and then her son-in-law. Darrow shook hands with them all.

Some one asked Mrs. Massie whether she wanted to cable the good news to her father, who is in Los Angeles, en route here.

"No, thanks," she smiled. "I don't want to send a message until it's all over."

Massie declined to make a statement.

The court opened to find them all nervous. Darrow and the defendants rose while Judge Davis solemnly pronounced sentence.

"I sentence you to ten years at hard labor."

The courtroom was silent, except for the tropical breeze that whispered through the open windows. Massie, Mrs. Fortescue and the two sailors kept their faces taut.

Massie Half Smiles.

Kelley moved forward, as if he had forgotten his battle to send the defendants to prison.

"I move for a writ of mittimus forthwith," he said.

Massie and the others apparently knew what was coming. A half smile flitted across the lieutenant's drawn face.

Judge Davis called them all forward, one at a time, Jones first, committing them to the bailiff. Every one seemed to realize that the formal commutations would arrive by the time they had completed their sentence of one hour.

Mrs. Fortescue almost pranced toward the bailiff.

"This is a swell jail," beamed Jones. "A lot better than Al Capone's. I wonder how Al feels. They took him down to Atlanta by special train, didn't they?"

The United Press asked the prosecutor what effect the commutations would have on the pending Ala Moana attack case in which Kahahawai's four native companions are to be tried on charges of attacking Mrs. Massie.

Plans Are Not Altered.

"None," Kelley said. "We intend to go right through with the prosecution.

The failure of a jury last autumn to agree in the first trial of the alleged attackers brought about Kahahawai's death.

Massie told at his own trial how scurrilous stories were circulated about himself and his wife. Only a confession from one of the accused, he said, could end the rumors. He and Mrs. Fortescue then conceived the plan of kidnaping Kahahawai, he continued.

He said they enlisted support of Jones and Lord and then abducted Kahahawai from in front of the Federal Building here last January. They took him to Mrs. Fortescue's luxurious cottage, where he was shot to death.

They wrapped his body in strips of tarpaulin and were driving toward Koko Head Geyser when police arrested them. Prosecutor Kelley charged that they intended to throw the body into the geyser, thus ending any possibility of Kahahawai's remains being found.

Pens Message to Husband.

Mrs. Fortescue almost wept for joy as she penned the following message for the United Press to deliver to her husband, Granville Roland Fortescue, in Los Angeles:

"Free to come home, dear. GRACIE."

She sent a second message to Mrs. Charles Bell, a relative, who is with her husband. It read:

"Meet you in California. All love. "GRACIE."

A third message Mrs. Fortescue sent to her daughter, Rion Fortescue, in Oxford, England. It said:

"Meet you at Wildhome after college. Love. MOTHER."

The effervescent Jones cabled his mother, Mrs. E. M. Jones, New Bedford, Mass., thus:

"Dear moms. Will be home soon. Keep the coffee hot. ALBERT."

The widely smiling Darrow, who regarded this trial as the climax to his 50 years before the criminal bar, told the United Press "Neither the defense nor the prosecution made any trades or promises."

"We are pleased at what has been done so far," Darrow said, "but we are not satisfied with this commutation. My clients automatically lost their citizenship when they were convicted, but an unconditional pardon will fix that point."

He said he hoped Mrs. Massie's alleged assailants would not be retried.

After the defendants had served their sentence they hastened to the Young Hotel. There they posed, for news photographers and chatted with their attorneys.

The commutation caused them to lose their civil rights, but Darrow said he would push immediately a move for a full unconditional pardon.

May Not Be Retried.

Honolulu, May 4 (A.P.).—It became virtually certain today that the four men charged with criminal assault on Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of a naval lieutenant, last September 12 will not be brought to trial again.

Prosecutor John C. Kelley, his Irish temper apparently high over Gov. Lawrence Judd's action in freeing the four Americans convicted of slaying Joseph Kahahawai, refused to discuss the retrial other than to say he was "ready to try it."

But Mrs. Massie, key witness, said she was following the advice of Clarence Darrow, who defended the Americans, and said he had suggested she return to the mainland without appearing again. Kahahawai was a defendant in the assault case.

"One jury disagreed," Darrow pointed out. "My experience has been that a case where there has been disagreement is seldom settled. I think a retrial would be a useless waste of public money and would not be for the best interests of the community." Attorneys here said without Mrs. Massie, retrial would be useless.

Assault Not Considered.

Attorney General Harry Hewitt said there had been no consideration of the Massie assault case in the negotiations which led to the commutation of the ten-year sentences of Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie, Lord and Jones to one hour.

"So far as the Territory is concerned we are ready to proceed with the prosecution of the case at the earliest opportunity," Hewitt said.

Darrow said Mrs. Massie had told her story twice.

"She has suffered enough," he said, "I don't think she can do any good by staying to tell her story a third time. I believe the outcome of this case is the best for everybody concerned. I think it is the only way to return to normalcy and good feeling in the community. But I want to say that everybody here has been most kind to us. I admire the Hawaiians particularly for their handling of this difficult situation."

The defendants in the assault case have been free on bail since the mistrial last December 6, staying closely to their homes. Since the verdict last Friday each has had a police guard.

Reaction to Honolulu Move Sharply Divided

Honolulu, May 4 (A.P.).—The reaction to the commutation of sentences in the Massie slaying case in this sunflooded paradise, where all races live, was sharply divided. From Walter F. Dillingham, millionaire financial and commercial leader, came commendation of the governor's action.

Princess David Kawanankoa, Republican national committeewoman, who speaks for the native Hawaiians, commented in a bitter vein. She said:

"The atmosphere has been so permeated with 'laxity of conditions and strict law enforcement' for the past few months that belief that justice could only be served by strict adherence to law has become part of our daily existence.

"With this commutation the verdict of a jury composed of men of intelligence, sound judgment and good character with the facts and law before them, becomes a farce and the truth, as brought out by the prosecution, becomes a travesty. Are we to infer from the governor's act that there are two sets of laws in Hawaii—one for the favored few and another for the people in general?"

MASSIE PARDON ADVOCATES IN ATTACK ON COMMUTATION

conviction was improper and they should have been acquitted," continuing:

"They ought not to have been made to serve even one hour. The stigma that attaches to that sentence ought to be removed in some way."

The House territories committee yesterday unanimously voted in favor of "a thorough and complete survey of the government of Hawaii," and instructed its chairman, Representative Williams (Democrat), Texas, to introduce a resolution for that purpose.

Eager to determine if Gov. Judd's action amounted to a pardon, which he urged, Senator Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, chairman of the territories committee, asked for news of the case.

"If the commutation of sentence is a pardon, I am delighted," Bingham said. "If not, I am disappointed. I think a pardon due."

Praise From Logan.

A word of praise came from Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, who introduced yesterday a bill authorizing the President to pardon the defendants. Logan had this to say:

"It shows a spirit over there that is taking care of the situation and I am very much gratified to learn of it."

But Logan added he would seek enactment of his bill, which would apply that power to all Territorial convictions, explaining it was proposed chiefly with the Massie case in mind.

From Representative Thatcher (Republican), Kentucky, came the declaration the commutation is "temporizing," to which he added:

"If they are going to do anything, they ought to grant a full pardon. They are just trying to save their faces by recognizing a technicality."

Thatcher is sponsoring a petition signed already by about 120 members of Congress, asking Judd to pardon the four. He said he was going to send to Judd the additional names obtained yesterday, which included:

Representatives Watson, Dominick, Thurston, Johnson, of Oklahoma; Wright, Treadway, Ruth Pratt, Swing and Arentz, and Senators Fletcher, Sheppard and Logan.

Chairman Sumners, of the House judiciary committee, said that group would meet today to consider the bill he prepared with Representative Delaney (Democrat), New York, to give the President power to pardon persons convicted of felonies in territories and possessions.

Sumners said, "It is doubtful whether the President now has the power," while Delaney suggested that to avoid losing their citizenship, the four defendants might refuse to accept sentence and appeal the conviction to a higher court.

News Great, Says Crisp.

"The news is great," was the comment of Representative Crisp (Democrat), Georgia, author of a bill asking the President to pardon them. He indicated he might not press the measure for action by the judiciary committee.

Delegate Houston, of Hawaii, who can join in debate in the House but has no vote, said he favored an investigation in Hawaii, which he said "thus far has had no investigation," but only "a star chamber session."

"The Richardson investigation was behind closed doors," Houston said. "I would welcome an open hearing."

Representative Britten, of Illinois, ranking Republican member of the naval affairs committee, said:

"The one-hour sentence should be completely annulled by President Hoover and Gov. Judd should immediately institute legal proceedings against all the natives implicated in the Massie case."

Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, said:

"I think Gov. Judd has made a very serious mistake which will turn up to plague the future administration of justice in Hawaii."

DOOM OF BONUS BILL FORESEEN BY RAINEY

Plan Will Never Pass, He Says, as Advocates Claim Idea Is Gaining.

(Associated Press.)

A confident prediction that cash redemption of the $2,000,000,000 soldiers' bonus will not become law was made yesterday by the House majority leader. Meanwhile, the ways and means committee prepared to act on the controverted proposal that the payment be made with currency issued for that purpose.

Representative Rainey, the Democratic chieftain, told newspapermen flatly that the bill "hasn't a chance" and that "the committee wont approve any fiat money plan."

Bonus advocates insisted, however, that eleven of the 25 committee members already were on their side and hoped to add enough support for a majority.

"Our plan to pay the certificates is the only plan that will place money among the masses and cause an increase in the velocity of money and credits," Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, said.

"It is gaining public support every day and this Congress can not afford to adjourn without doing something to help the masses of the people."

"Look what happened to money all over the world yesterday after the House passed the Goldsborough bill," Rainey said. "That bill provides for the mildest kind of inflation and leaves it in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board.

"The committee is not going to report such a drastic inflationary scheme as this bonus plan, and even if its sponsors do get it out on the floor it can not become law this session.

"If a petition to discharge the committee gets the necessary 145 signatures, May 23 would be the first day a vote could be had under the rules. Then, supposing the House passed the bill, what chance would it have in the Senate that late in the session?"

Rainey said it might be a good thing to get the bill on the floor for action so that business could be assured no fiat money will be issued.

CENSORSHIP GROWS IN LINDBERGH HUNT

by water stormy weather is said to have seriously hampered the work of Mr. Curtis. While the lid of secrecy was tightly clamped down at the naval base, the other two Norfolk intermediaries, Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, and the Very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock, remained equally noncommittal.

Those believed to be working with Mr. Curtis aboard the Marcon include Capt. Kenneth Whiting, commandant of the air base; Lieut. George L. Richard, naval pilot, and Edwin B. Bruce, of Elmira, N. Y., a friend of Mr. Curtis. Reports are also current that Col. Lindbergh himself is aboard the Marcon to aid in the efforts toward recovery of his infant son.

Hopewell, N. J., May 4 (A.P.).—State police investigating the kidnaping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., today took into custody a man who gave his name as Charles A. Dunbar.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, said Dunbar was being questioned "as to his reasons for being near the neighborhood." He was picked up when found loitering about Hopewell.

BAKER ASKS REFORM IN CHOOSING JUDGES

American Judicature Session at Mayflower Discusses Bench Appointments.

The need for methods of improvement in judicial selection was voiced yesterday by Newton D. Baker, president of the American Judicature Society, at the nineteenth annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

The increased number of lawyers, he said, made a careful selection of members of the American bench necessary. Judicial councils, he advocated, should be given greater advisory powers. He cited the system of selection now in operation in Cleveland, Ohio, where a council composed of members of the bar advised the voters on the best qualified members for the bench. Mr. Baker advocated representation of the laity on judicial councils.

A discussion on the selection of judges was carried on by the society, some of the members favoring appointment and others advocating a modification of the elective system. Dean Justin Miller, of the Duke University Law School, and Grenville Clark, of the law firm of Root, Clark & Buckner, of New York, led the discussion.

A meeting of the board of directors of the society was held later in the afternoon, attended by members representing every State in the Union. Judge Clarence N. Goodwin, a former justice of the Illinois Appellate Court, who is the chairman of the board, presided at the meeting.

Charles A. Boston, former president of the American Bar Association, was the speaker at the dinner of the society last night. Mr. Baker presided at the dinner.

He was introduced to dinner guests as "a former resident of Washington, and a possible future one."

CROWNING OF APPLE FESTIVAL QUEEN WITNESSED BY 25,000

Teachers College Glee Club, dressed in colonial costume, sang royal anthems as the procession of blossom princesses from 35 States in the Union took their places on either side of the esplanade. The princesses wore pink gowns, picture hats with wreaths of flowers and jackets of darker pink.

Ambassador Claudel appeared on the esplanade with Judge Philip Williams, Chief Justice of Blossomland; Mayor F. Amos Shyrock of Winchester, and the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, dean of the city.

A military escort from Staunton Military Academy preceded the queen with drawn sabers, taking positions in line with the princesses.

As the queen took her position just below the throne, voluminous shouts of "Long live the queen" broke forth from the assemblage.

The tricolor of France and the Stars and Stripes of the United States floated majestically above the heads of the court as the Chief Justice of Blossomland said:

"Sirs: I present unto you Queen Shenandoah IX of the House of Washington. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage."

After the queen presented herself for coronation, the chief justice presented her with the robe and scepter of power and the golden apple signifying plenty. Queen Shenandoah next was presented with the "key to the City of Winchester," which was carved of oak wood from the historic Fort Loudoun here which George Washington constructed to defend the colonists against Indian invasion.

Claudel Places Crown.

Ambassador Claudel of France placed the crown of authority on the queen's head as the chief justice spoke, in part:

"In the name and for the realm of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, with devotion to the memory of Washington, the brave, the wise, the good, the father of his country, the friend of mankind, lover of the beauty and bounty of nature and with grateful remembrance of his association with our city—Helen Washington—we place this crown, emblem of nobility and dignity, upon your head."

Just as the last words of the oath resounded through amplifiers in Handley Stadium, Handley High School cadet orchestra struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner," to be followed by "La Marseillaise."

The coronation was the second in a long series of events of the apple blossom festival in honor of George Washington. In the morning 3,000 school children paraded in colonial costume, one entire section being dressed as Martha and George Washington.

Just after the coronation, a pageant, "The Harvest of the Years," depicting growth of the Shenandoah Valley, given in honor of the newly crowned queen, depicted George Washington as a youthful surveyor here, a member of the colonial militia and later in the Virginia House of Burgesses. Tomorrow afternoon, a special division in the grand feature parade will portray again these episodes in the life of Washington and also his inauguration as first President of the United States.

After the coronation, Queen Shenandoah IX visited nearby apple orchards in full blossom and tonight she received her court at a formal reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Stouffer.

Ambassador Claudel arrived in Winchester early this morning, accompanied by his daughter, Mlle. Reine Claudel, and secretary, C. Clarac. He was welcomed by Col. B. M. Roszel, head master of Shenandoah Valley Academy; former Gov. Harry F. Byrd, Col. H. J. Benchoff, head master of Massanutten Military Academy; William E. Cooper, apple fete executive chairman; Director General Richards and W. W. Glass. He planned to return to Washington late today.

Tonight a torchlight parade of firemen from Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland was held. Comic aspects were predominant, among them being a fully equipped moonshine liquor still in operation—with water. The use of the still was granted the firemen by special order from Judge Philip Williams in Corporation Court.

From a half dozen dance halls the blare of orchestras told of apple blossom balls being held tonight.

Tomorrow's program:

11 a. m.—Presentation of pageant, "The Harvest of the Years," in Handley Stadium.

Noon—Luncheon for the queen and her court by Mr. and Mrs. John M. Steck.

9 p. m.—Queen's ball in Shenandoah Valley Academy.

9:30 p. m.—Apple blossom balls in local dance halls.

SHOALS BILL ACTION IS PROMISED TODAY

Six-Hour Debate in House Leaves Federal Operation Unsettled.

(Associated Press.)

Muscle Shoals, an old political friend, was entertained by the House yesterday for more than six hours, but the session was so talkative that final action was postponed until today.

About half of the eighteen-page Hill bill had been completed when Chairman McSwain, of the military committee, moved an adjournment with the understanding that today's session will be continuous until a final vote on the measure.

But the chief issue, Government operations, still remained unsettled. It was assailed by administration Republicans, who predicted another presidential veto, and Representative Goss (Republican), Connecticut, gave notice he would ask its elimination from the bill.

This section would direct the governing board of three created to control the $140,000,000 war-time project to operate the nitrate plants if no private lease is contracted within eighteen months. A later lease still would be in order, however, upon receipt of a satisfactory bid.

An effort was made by Representative Holaday (Republican), Illinois, to substitute the Secretaries of War, Agriculture and Commerce for the special board, but his motion was rejected, 71 to 38.

This was the principal vote of the day. Representative Snell, the Republican leader, proposed a liberalization of the leasing provision relating to carrying charges for stored fertilizer, but was defeated, 114 to 95.

An amendment by Representative Parker (Democrat), Georgia, fixing a $10,000 limit on the salaries of any employes of the Muscle Shoals board was accepted.

Representative Underhill (Republican), Massachusetts, predicted President Hoover would veto the bill, "and save the people another $100,000,000." Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, former Republican leader, said:

"There is no reasonable possibility that a lease will be made in eighteen months and if it is not made, then the Government goes into the fertilizer business."

Representative Taylor (Republican), Tennessee, told the House he would propose an amendment to authorize construction of the $34,000,000 Cove Creek Dam on the Clinch River in Tennessee.

Jewell Downs' Pupils Present Song Program

Enthralling songs of Italy and the moving ballads of mother and home were heard in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel last night when pupils of Jewell Downs presented a program of 30 renditions.

Seating capacity was so limited that part of the audience was obliged to occupy the entrance hallway to the ballroom. Among those scoring encores were Jean Bishop, singing "Passing By" and "Il Bacio;" Mason Barnes Bray, with "Little Mother of Mine," and Bert Wells, with "Secrecy."

our people want to go to war a war may very well at any time be forced upon us."

Mr. Hale contended approval of his bill would indicate to the other powers represented at Geneva that "we really mean what we say when we talk about parity with any other naval power and when we insist that certain ratios be maintained."

"Our claim that we must have parity with Great Britain and a given ration with Japan loses all force when, though given by treaty the right to do so, we take no steps to exercise that right," he said.

"We are rapidly becoming not one of the two great and equal naval powers of the world, but a poor and trailing third naval power."

Mr. Hale said the net result of this Nation's attempt to lead the way in disarmament had been to weaken the American fleet in comparison to others.

"Our fleet," he said, "is fast becoming a Navy of obsolete ships." Only 170 of the 373 ships on the Navy list today, he added, are under age as compared with 184 for Japan and 150 for Great Britain.

5 FREED IN COLONIAL TEAHOUSE VICE CASE

Judge Directs Verdict When Mann Act Plot Is Held Unproved.

A directed verdict yesterday freed four men and a woman on charges of conspiracy to violate the Mann act in one of the cases growing out of vice investigation which had its inception in a general shooting at the Old Colonial Tea House at Bladensburg, Md., last fall. Judge W. Calvin Chestnut, in United States District Court, Baltimore, directed the jury to return an acquittal verdict on the ground that the Government had failed to prove a conspiracy on the part of the defendants to transport women from Washington to the tea house.

The defendants freed are Charles "Doggy" Leavitt, manager of the place; Charles Missler, Samuel Kushner, Mrs. Margie Kushner and William Hancock.

Judge Chestnut said in his instructions to the jury that acquittal did not mean the defendants could not be punished. He said they could be indicted separately under the Mann act and the acquittal was not a bar to further prosecution.

Burkinshaw Prosecutor.

Neil Burkinshaw, of Washington, who was appointed special assistant to the Attorney General to handle the cases, said last night that he had not decided on his future course in regard to the conspiracy case or whether he would move for reindictments.

"This indictment does not charge a violation of the white slave law or that these people are unworthy characters; it charges them with conspiracy or an agreement to do a certain thing, Judge Chestnut declared. Under the law they must be acquitted on such a charge if it is not proved no matter how immoral their general conduct may have been," the court said. "This does not mean that the defendants can not be properly punished."

Charles J. Danford and Ahmad Abraham, both of whom were named in the indictment, pleaded nolo contendere and were not on trial.

At the conclusion of the case, Judge Chestnut sentenced Abraham to one year in jail, and suspended the sentence on condition of good behavior. The disposition of Danford's case was deferred for consideration.

Hancock, immediately after the verdict, was taken in custody by George W. Collier, United States marshal, on a detainer placed against him by authorities of Lancaster County, Pa., where he is wanted on a murder charge.

Two Girls Witnesses.

Verne Edwards and Eva McCoy, the two girls alleged to have been transported to the teahouse by the defendants, both testified that Leavitt was the manager of the house, and that Mrs. Kushner assisted him in his capacity. They said they were taken at different times to the place in an automobile driven by one of the defendants, and that they had marked cards for Samuel Kushner to distribute in Washington showing the location of the house and the route used to get there. These cards, they said, were to be distributed by taxi drivers in Washington.

The Edwards girl said that Hancock took her to the place while the other witness testified that she was taken by Danford.

The case was the third to be tried as a result of a protracted investigation into vice conditions in this and neighboring States. In the first two instances the defendants were convicted and Chester Renzulli, a defendant in both cases, was sentenced to serve two years in prison. Anna Lutz, a codefendant with Renzulli also was convicted and sentenced to serve a month in jail and pay a fine of $250.

G. W. U. Greek Letter Groups Debate Tonight

Two current subjects of national interest will be debated in the final rounds of the annual George Washington University interfraternity and intersorority debate contest to be held tonight at Corcoran Hall under the auspices of Delta Sigma Rho, honorary speech arts fraternity.

The subject, "Resolved, That the crime of kidnaping should be punishable by death," will be debated by the fraternities, Theta Upsilon Omega and Acacia, while the sororities, Zeta Tau Alpha and Phi Sigma Sigma will argue the question, "Resolved, That married women in Government positions whose husbands are gainfully employed should be replaced by qualified persons now unemployed."

CAPONE BEGINS 11-YEAR TERM IN PENITENTIARY AT ATLANTA

and one year in the Cook County (Chicago) Jail.

Capone is through with his old life as hoodlum boss of Chicago, he said, as prison walls loomed before him.

"I'm not just starting a new leaf," he said, "I'm opening a new book and the old one is closed for good." He had previously asserted he was through with "politics and all the other rackets."

The gangster whose word has been law in Chicago's gangland in recent years was resolved to be a meek and model prisoner, saying it was the smart thing to do to "go along with everybody and cooperate."

He said he wanted to enter all the prison activities he could, particularly in the athletic line. Capone particularly likes baseball and claims to be a "pretty good pitcher and first baseman even if I do say so myself."

Capone grew a bit philosophical toward the end of his train trip to prison. He said it was his idea that a person must make the best of things, even if they include a long term in a penitentiary. Remorse and foreboding, he said, led to one of two things—insanity or suicide, and he added "I'm not ready for either one."

It will be three or four weeks before prison officials determine what sort of work Capone's physical and mental attributes fit him for. He will spend that time in a special cell block for newcomers to determine, among other things, whether he has any contagious disease.

His expensive clothes, light gray fedora, silk underwear and fancy shirts, were taken from him and $230 he brought along deposited to his credit. He was given a regulation prison uniform, a bath and sent to bed.

Capone will be unquestionably the best known convict in the prison as it now holds no other outstanding criminals. But Federal officials believe even his great notoriety will die in the years he spends there. The Atlanta penitentiary has a reputation for no special privileges and for being leak-proof as far as news is concerned.

There will be no interviews and no pictures. Capone will be merely one of 3,000 with no news given out as to his activities.

Capone's Earning Power To Be Curtailed in Jail

(United Press.)

Al Capone will earn less money during his seven and one-half years in Atlanta Penitentiary than he spent each year for silk shirts in Chicago.

And—he may earn nothing at all.

Government officials know the gang chief's sleep will not be disturbed by the snipping of the hungry wolf. But they also said unless Capone works he won't be paid.

Too, he may not even be given a chance to earn a few pennies or dimes. The hoodlum who made millions in various rackets also is known as a good cook. Thus, he may be given work as a cook, which is not considered payable labor.

Income tax investigators found Capone could juggle figures aptly so he may toil for nothing over the penitentiary books. He must be employed in one of the prison industries, such as the cotton textile mill, the plant where mail bags and Army tents are made and other forms of manual labor, to be paid for it.

These convicts are paid approximately $7 a month and if Capone were regularly employed in these plants he would earn during his term less than $650, authorities here estimated.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN VOTER CLUB GROWS

Columbain League of Republicans Meets Here to Extend Its Field.

Plans for a Nation-wide extension of the Columbian Republican League, composed of Italian-American voters of six Eastern States, were made yesterday at a conference of the representatives of the voters from those States—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—it was announced last night by the Republican national committee.

It is proposed to extend the organization through Ohio, Michigan and Illinois and across the continent to California, with the result that its membership will be representative of States having within their borders 92 per cent of the Italian-American population of the entire country.

Between the morning and afternoon business sessions of the league leaders, numbering approximately 100 men and women, the delegates visited the White House, where they were received by President Hoover on the south lawn. This was followed by a luncheon at the Willard Hotel, headquarters for the meeting. Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, presided as toastmaster, and the speakers included William N. Doak, Secretary of Labor; Senators James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, and W. Warren Barbour, of New Jersey; Edward Corsi, commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island, N. Y., and W. Kingsland Macy, chairman of the Republican State central committee of New York. Harry E. Hull, commissioner of immigration, and Raymond Crist, commissioner of naturalization, were presented to the delegates and greeted them briefly.

Asserting that the Italians coming into the United States lead all other foreign groups in the acquisition of American citizenship, Secretary Doak said that this was not only a tribute to their intelligence and to their good faith, but likewise was an indication of what the country might expect of them in the way of loyalty and intelligent participation in the pursuit of good government.

Turning to the economic depression, the Labor Secretary said President Hoover had given his time, thought and energy to formulating and to giving the effect to plans "to fight this enemy of us all."

CALIFORNIA VOTE IS BLOW TO ROOSEVELT HOPES

direction. He looked like a winner, and politicians love a winner.

What then will be the psychological effect of Roosevelt's defeat in California, following as it does a bad showing in the East a week before? One effect of it may be that Kansas, Indiana and West Virginia and other States will veer away from Roosevelt and send uninstructed delegations to Chicago, thus endangering the New Yorker's chances of going into the convention with a majority.

Had Roosevelt won in California, his supporters were ready to ask favorite son candidates to renounce their own aspirations and get on the bandwagon. For them to make such a suggestion now would, in the opinion of the favorite son candidates, no doubt, be extremely bad taste.

It is not alone Roosevelt's poor showing in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and California that has hurt him. He has lost ground in ways that can not be expressed in figures. For one thing he has been getting a pretty severe hammering in the press. The unfavorable comment began with his "forgotten man" speech. Then came Al Smith's comment on it, and his implication that Roosevelt was a "demagogue." Many editors friendly to Roosevelt agreed that he "had it coming to him." In St. Paul, Roosevelt was expected to redeem himself, but there was widespread feeling that he had fallen down.

Rumor G. O. P. Wants Him.

Meanwhile the story has been broadcast that Republicans would welcome Roosevelt as a candidate, believing that he would be defeated in the East by President Hoover. The Roosevelt people say that this is "rank Republican propaganda." Be that as it may, the story hasn't done Roosevelt any good.

Nor has he been helped by another story that is going the rounds. This is to the effect that Samuel Seabury is going to call upon Gov. Roosevelt to fire Mayor "Jimmy" Walker and thus force Roosevelt to decide whether he wants to remove Walker and perhaps make a hit with the hinterland, or whether he wants to stand by Walker and make a hit with Tammany.

But probably the worst blow to fall on Roosevelt is the demonstrated fact that, pitted against real opposition, he is not the vote-getter that his supporters claimed he was.

There are many Democrats—and it would not be surprising if the number grew—who would like to see the party rid of the Smith-Roosevelt feud and all the other elements that make for uncertainty and discordancy.

Garner Elated by Big Vote.

The big question is, "Who will the party turn to if Roosevelt is ditched?" There were plenty of answers at the Capitol yesterday, the answers, of course, coming from the friends of other aspirants.

Thus, quoting Senator Tom Connally, of Texas:

"The factional fight between Smith and Roosevelt is making Garner stronger every day. The party can unite on Garner and elect him. The Democratic party needs harmony and united action. With Garner they are assured."

There were others who felt that the Garner boom has been damaged beyond repair by the conduct of the House. In saying so, however, they agreed that Garner is going to have a lot to say about who is nominated.

The Speaker himself has not yet said that he is a candidate. His comment yesterday dealt merely with the size of the vote.

"The most interesting thing to me," he said, "is the large Democratic vote. I understand it was the largest on record in California. I think it most significant."

True, the Democratic vote was a record breaker, but even so it fell behind the "confidence vote" given to President Hoover. The President, despite the fact that he was unopposed in the Republican primary, polled a larger vote than Garner, Roosevelt and Smith combined.

This cheered Republican leaders, who have been considerably worried by the Democratic trend in California.

Senator J. Ham Lewis, of Illinois, himself a favorite son candidate, said yesterday that one possible outgrowth of the California primary would be a movement to form a Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

Friends of Garner, however, did not think he would relish the idea of swapping the Speakership for the Vice Presidency.

Ritchie's Chances Improve.

The adherents of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland felt yesterday that he was in the best position he has ever occupied with respect to the presidential nomination. In the event of a deadlock, Ritchie is certain to be given a "run."

It may seem a curious thing, but virtually all Democrats agree that Ritchie is an able administrator. His great handicap is the fact that he comes from a small State.

"Political parties do not nominate men," said one Democratic sage yesterday. "They nominate States."

Admittedly, that accounts for a large part of Roosevelt's popularity. New York is the big prize in the electoral college, having 47 votes.

If Roosevelt should be dropped, and assuming Al Smith would not have a chance, New York would still have two men to offer the convention—Owen D. Young and John W. Davis.

Ohio, another cradle of Presidents, has in addition to its favorite son, Gov. George White, three men to offer—James M. Cox, the 1920 nominee; Newton D. Baker, and Senator Robert Bulkley. Incidentally, one of the Republican senators, a man who has gained quite a reputation as a political prophet, is willing to bet money that Bulkley will be the nominee.

Dill Concedes Damage.

Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, an ardent Roosevelt supporter, was quite frank in discussing the California result yesterday.

"If Roosevelt had won," he said, "we would have claimed it as a great victory. Now that he has lost California, we can't minimize the fact that it is a blow to us."

Had Roosevelt won in California, Dill said, the favorite son movement would have crumbled. Now, he concedes, it may be strengthened.

The new senator from Georgia, Maj. John Cohen, said he thought Roosevelt had run a "remarkable race" in California.

"He was running against four of the most powerful men in the country," he said. "Yes, four—William Randolph Hearst, William G. McAdoo, Garner and Smith."

Californians in Congress attributed Garner's victory to the strange Hearst-McAdoo alliance. Hearst, a wet, threw the influence of his five California newspapers behind Garner, and McAdoo, a rabid prohibitionist, delivered to him his big dry following. This is to be found particularly in southern California, an area populated largely by former Iowa farmers.

Just where Garner stands on the prohibition question is not known, although there is a strong suspicion that he is wet. Anyway, McAdoo, having beaten the regular Democratic organization that was behind Roosevelt, is now expected to run for the nomination for the United States Senate.

Garner's big vote in California was no more surprising than was that of Al Smith. The "happy warrior" polled far more votes than the Roosevelt people thought he would, and wound up close on his rival's heels.

One serious weakness under which Roosevelt labored was lack of newspaper support. The only papers that crusaded for him were those of the McClatchey chain, and wherever these circulated Roosevelt ran well.

Roosevelt now has, roughly, 375 delegates instructed, pledged and claimed, allowing 50 in Pennsylvania, where the delegates are subject to dispute. There will be 1,154 delegates in the convention. A majority thus will be 578.

Strength of Opposition.

To get the nomination, a candidate must line up two-thirds, or 770. To block a candidate, the opposition must line up 385 delegates.

Taking the delegates Smith now has or soon will have and adding these to the delegates pledged to various favorite sons, plus delegates that Roosevelt does not seem likely to get, it is fairly easy to reach a total of more than 400.

If such a number could be held intact for any length of time, a Roosevelt victory would naturally be impossible. In some of the favorite son delegations, however, there is considerable sentiment for Roosevelt.

FIGHTS NEAR HARBIN CLAIM HEAVY TOLL

Chan-Shan, the Chinese commander who so long held the Japanese from Tsitsihar last year, were reported to be the nucleus of Chinese resistance.

Gen. Mah was subdued and later joined the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchoukuo as governor of Nellunkiang province. He left his capital of Tsitsihar for the area near the Soviet border in north Manchuria at last reports, and some authorities said he had been taken prisoner by his lieutenants, who opposed his friendly activities with the Japanese.

Gen. Muria, another Japanese officer whose forces had been operating eastward from Harbin, today boarded armored trains with heavy reinforcements for Gen. Hirose, who was making little headway.

Meanwhile conditions of revolt were no better in the Sungari district to the eastward, and it was reported that Gen. Tingchao, leader of the Chinese rebels and an associate, Gen. Li Tu, had offered $125,000 for the head of Gen. Hirose.

Patrol Boat Is Badly Damaged.

Gloucester, Mass., May 4 (A.P.).—The Coast Guard patrol boat 156 was badly damaged today in a collision with the Virginia and Joan, a fisherman, in the harbor. The bow of the Coast Guard craft was crumpled and only her water-tight bulkheads kept her afloat. No one was injured.

"Why bring that up?" —the cigarette trade asks!

FOR years there has been generally a striking avoidance of the word "inhale" in cigarette advertising. Why? Goodness only knows! For everybody inhales—knowingly or unknowingly! Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

That's why it's all-important to be certain that your cigarette smoke is pure and clean—to be sure that you don't inhale certain impurities.

Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question—for it has solved the problem! It gives you the protection you want . . . because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

"Fifty million smokers can't be wrong!" So whether you inhale knowingly or unknowingly—safeguard your delicate membranes!

EDUCATORS DISCUSS JUSTICE OF NATIONS

American Conference Opens Here; Borchard Speaks on World Courts.

By JAMES WALDO FAWCETT.

Prof. Edwin M. Borchard, law school, Yale University, and the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, school of foreign service, Georgetown University, shared honors with William R. Castle, Undersecretary of State, as speakers at the sixth general assembly of the American Conference on Institutions for the Establishment of International Justice at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building last evening.

Prof. Borchard's subject was "America and a Court of Justice for the Nations." He said in part: "To our world genuine peace is even more essential than it was to the world of a century ago, for distubance now wreaks greater injury to greater numbers and endangers our economic and social system.

"The problem of preserving peace involves the preservation of the life of individuals and of nations as well as of the accumulated benefits of human experience. * * * The major problems which trouble the life of nations and hence humanity lie not in the legal field, but in the economic, political, and, I submit, psychological fields. * * *

Pleading for "enlightened self-interest," Prof. Borchard said, "a policy of live and let live" must be restored among the nations. "As it is, we are putting to an extraordinary test the patience of helpless mankind." In effect the World War of 1914-1918 is still going on.

Dr. Walsh Is Speaker.

Prof. Borchard declared: "What has happened since 1917 should awaken the more responsible guardians of our institutions to the disintegrating influences of a further refusal to terminate the war by a peace of reconciliation and understanding. Some of the political devices which have been created since 1919 have lulled the world into a false sense of security by blinding it to the realities of international life. An awakening in this respect has become urgent if our existing order, national and international, is to be saved."

Dr. Walsh, speaking on "International Peace Through International Justice," said: "If ever cool heads and steady hands were needed at the helms of ships of state, it is at the present hour. Otherwise the peace of the world lies at the mercy of an accident and might easily be transferred to the hands of an irresponsible individual.

"In human relations it is the heart of humanity that must first be won. The head will follow. It is difficult to reverse that process and expect to command lasting friendship. Commendable indeed are naval conferences, agreements for limitation of armaments, pacts for the outlawry of war, economic conventions, and similar laudable attempts to diminish the dangers of international warfare by eliminating both the occasions and the physical instrumentalities of conflict. But they provide inadequate guarantees of peace unless simultaneously we disarm the spirit of hatred and distrust among nations, tranquillize men's hearts, and educate them to mutual respect and reciprocal confidence."

Justice Between Nations.

At the morning session Dr. Justin Miller, dean of the law school, Duke University, spoke on "A Practical Agency for the Promotion of Justice Between Nations." He said that neither a League of Nations nor a World Court can solve the entire problem. He pleaded for the development of international education as an agency toward peace.

Dr. Edward C. Wynne, assistant chief, hitsorical division, Department of State; William P. MacCracken, jr., secretary, American Bar Association, and Harold G. Moulton, president, Brookings Institution, will be the speakers at this morning's session. Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Dr. William John Cooper and Dr. Stephen P. Duggan, will address a luncheon meeting at the Hay-Adams House. The final meeting of the conference will be a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, with Representative James M. Beck, presiding, and Secretary of Labor William N. Doak, Representative Ruth Bryan Owen and Dr. Elon H. Hooker as speakers.

CASTLE CITES DEVELOPMENT IN FOREIGN POLICY OF U. S.

while the possibility of war to prevent war, with the concurrent necessity to send our young men to fight at the behest of other governments than our own, remains in the covenant of the league."

While the Hoover doctrine in American foreign policy is not basically new, the application which Secretary Stimson gave to it last January has never been invoked before. During the office of Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, the United States announced that any agreement made in violation of its treaties by the Japanese or Chinese would not be recognized by this Government.

However, this confined the American action to the open door and did not imply concurrent action from foreign governments as happened with the Hoover doctrine.

Here the address contained the following significant passage:

"The President has been determined ever since he took office really to base American policy on the pact of Paris. He believes in all measures honestly to avoid war, but is determined that these measures should not themselves envisage war. He, therefore, looked into the future, realized that in the mechanism of international relations a stern deterrent of the use of force would be to make valueless the results of war. Out of this earnest belief grew that new dictum in international law that territorial gains made by any nation guilty of breaking the terms of the Kellogg Pact shall not be recognized. The spoils of war become Dead Sea fruits.

"This idea was first embodied in the note of the Secretary of State to Japan and China of January 8 in the following words: 'That it (the American Government), does not intend to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the covenants and obligations of the pact of Paris of August 27, 1928, to which treaty both China and Japan, as well as the United States, are parties.' It was amplified in the Secretary's letter to Senator Borah of February 23 as follows: 'On January 8 last, upon the instruction of the President, this Government formally notified Japan and China that it would not recognize any situation, treaty or agreement entered into by those governments in violation of the covenants of these treaties, which affected the rights of our Government or its citizens in China. If a similar decision should be reached and a similar position taken by the other governments of the world, a caveat will be placed upon such action, which, we believe, will effectively bar the legality hereafter of any title or right sought to be obtained by pressure or treaty violation.'

"This new American doctrine, inspired by the President, was accepted by the League of Nations on March 11 as follows:

"'Considering that the principles governing international relations and the peaceful settlement of disputes between members of the league, above referred to, are in full harmony with the pact of Paris, which is one of the corner stones of the peace organization of the world and under article 2 of which "the high contracting parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature and whatever origin they may be which may arise among them shall never be sought except by pacific means."

"'Proclaims the binding nature of the principles and provisions referred to above and declares that it is incumbent upon the members of the League of Nations not to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the covenant of the League of Nations.'"

The official verification of the American Government's attitude toward embargoes and boycotts contained in the Acting Secretary of State's speech will be interpreted in all quarters as a most significant contribution to the diplomatic developments in the Far East.

It was recalled here last night that several informed organizations last year had endeavored to bring the State Department to a formal announcement of an embargo against Japan for her activities in Manchuria and in Shanghai. The underlying principles behind the department's refusal to do so were thus explained by Mr. Castle:

"The idea is opposed by the administration primarily because an official boycott is an act which would almost surely lead to war. What the proponents of this idea want is for the Government officially to declare an embargo on all trade or communication with the offending country. Clearly this would be useless unless the act were concurred in by all other nations. And here again immediately rises the question as to what body we shall give the right to make the decision—an immediate decision—as to whether or not the nation in question has violated the terms of the treaty of Paris."

The Acting Secretary then said:

"But there are other reasons why the American Government believes that such a boycott would be unfortunate. As I said, to be effective it must be practically universal, and unanimity is hard to achieve unless you have something in the nature of a superauthority which must be obeyed. If the United States alone declared a boycott, besides being useless it would almost certainly be considered an act of war, and at the very least would mean that for years to come we should be singled out for hatred by the nation in question. If the boycott were universal, it would somehow have to be enforced. The ports of the nations to be embargoed would have to be blockaded, and if there is anything more likely to lead to war than a blockade I have yet to hear of it. People say that a boycott would be effective because people would recognize its justice. Do not the signatories of the Kellogg pact recognize the justice of that treaty? I believe they do, yet the proponents of the boycott are the very ones who cry most loudly that the pact must have more than a sense of justice and morality to enforce its observance."

BAR GROUPS HEADS PLAN CELEBRATION

Program for Corner Stone Laying at New Supreme Court Discussed.

Plans for the laying of the corner stone of the new Supreme Court Building October 13 were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the executive council of the American Bar Association and representatives of the local bar associations at the Mayflower Hotel.

Extensive ceremonies, which will parallel the ceremonies held in 1893 to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol, were outlined at the meeting. Representatives of the District Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association, the Women's Bar Association and the Patent Lawyers Association were present at the conference.

Guy A. Thompson, president of the American Bar Association, announced a four-day program for the organization's annual meeting, October 12 to 16. Local law units plan to entertain the visiting members of the bar, and visits to historic sites are scheduled.

Original treaties entered into by the United States will be exhibited for the benefit of the convening members. The documents will be displayed in the various Government departments.

Town Claims Record For Widow Residents

Waynesville, Ill., May 4 (A.P.).—This old central Illinois town with a nineteenth century flavor, today checked over its inhabitants and set up a new claim to distinction.

Every twelfth resident is a widow.

The town, with 592 residents, is the home of 50 widows, the check revealed.

Waynesville, settled in 1825 and according to tradition nearly selected once as Illinois' capital, has no paved roads within its boundaries or within a mile of its outskirts.

Search for Child Lost In Mountain Delayed

Los Angeles, May 4 (A.P.).—Cold and rain conspired with rugged terrain today to defeat the efforts of scores of searchers for 3-year-old Cecilia Mitchell, missing since Monday in the mountains of the Ridge Route District. The opinion that the little girl could not be alive after two freezing nights was expressed by Los Angeles deputy sheriffs participating in the search.

The child left the Hoyden Ranch near Quail Lake, where her mother is employed as housekeeper, to hunt wild flowers. The little sled she was dragging was found the following day several hundred yards from the Ridge Route highway.

JOBS VS. THE PORK BARREL.

Economy for Government workers and pork for special interests!

That is the slogan on which Congress has acted to date in its attempt to cut down Government expenditures. As the economy bill passed the House it carried alleged savings of $38,000,000. More than $30,000,000 of that amount was taken from the salaries and expense allowances of Federal employes. Less than $8,000,000 represents the curtailment of extravagance and the abolition of useless functions. With the exception of gouging Government workers, the House has utterly refused to cut down expenditures.

The efforts of both the Senate and the House to slash the payrolls have left Government workers in a precarious situation. As a result of the economy bill salaries above $2,500 are to be cut 11 per cent. That reduction, falling chiefly upon the higher paid employes, will not bring any great hardships to the Government personnel. But when combined with the action of the Senate in reducing appropriation bills for the various departments by 10 per cent, an unwarranted penalty is levied against Federal employes. Thousands will be discharged unless some order is brought out of this chaotic program.

Congress has brought itself to a most absurd position. While pretending to favor the interests of wage earners in general, it enacts legislation that is certain to increase the army of unemployed. Congress goes on a rampage against extravagance and then applies the axe only to Government workers. Extravagant provisions that benefit its own members are left undisturbed. Handouts to special groups that are politically strong are increased, and pork barrel appropriations are maintained. Only clerks, who have been serving the Government at low salaries because they considered their positions secure, are cut off.

A real economy program could eliminate sufficient waste to make the reduction of Federal salaries and the dismissal of Government workers entirely unnecessary to balance the budget. But all hope that the demoralized House might adopt such a program seems to have passed. The Senate has blundered through some appropriation bills without seriously considering the unemployment that will result from the arbitrary reduction of payroll items. The net result is to sacrifice governmental efficiency and penalize Federal workers for the sake of continuing doles to special interests that have no legitimate claim upon the Government.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will yet move to bring order out of this chaotic condition. Government workers ought not to be sacrificed to preserve the interests of treasury-raiding politicians. This attempt to throw the full weight of the economy program upon the men and women who serve Uncle Sam is one of the most despicable gestures that have been made at this session of Congress.

PASS THE NAVAL BILL.

Action on the Hale bill, authorizing the construction of enough tonnage to bring the United States Navy up to the strength prescribed in the London naval treaty, could not be taken at a more appropriate time than at present. Pleas that the measure be delayed until the conclusion of the Geneva Disarmament Conference have no validity. There is no remote possibility that the London treaty will be upset by a new agreement at the Geneva gathering. On the other hand, there are compelling reasons why the United States should inform Europe that it intends to maintain a navy of full treaty strength.

While the Hale bill was under discussion in the Senate, efforts were being made at Geneva to reopen the entire naval question. Senator Charles Dumont, representing the French delegation, attempted to convince the naval commission that the questions settled at London should be threshed out again. But he met stern opposition from Senator Swanson, of the American delegation. Great Britain will stand with the United States against breaking down the naval treaty.

The motive of France is plain to every one. The Paris government has let it be known that it has no intention of disarming. France merely raises the question of naval armaments to obscure the issue before the conference and to make the failure of that venture the more certain. The motion of Senator Dumont is another gesture to divert the responsibility of failure away from France.

Nothing that can take place at Geneva will alter the urgent necessity of building up the American Navy to treaty strength. Congress has allowed the Navy to lag behind so that the sea power of this country is only a trifle greater than that of Japan. The nations of Europe, which claim to be so poverty-stricken that they can not pay their war debts, maintain enormous military as well as naval forces. Only America lags behind what is considered essential for adequate national defense.

Senator Lewis says that "nothing would bring the Geneva conference to action more quickly than to observe the United States had taken steps to proceed with the upbuilding of its Navy." This country has nothing to gain by listening to the disarmament pipe dreams that come out of Geneva. Let the Hale bill pass so that Uncle Sam may proceed to build the Navy up to parity with Great Britain. Evidence that the United States intends to pursue a vigorous course in this respect would have a wholesome influence upon Europe.

GARNER WINS CALIFORNIA.

Seldom has so rapid and decisive a change been registered in the pre-convention fortunes of a presidential candidate as the last few weeks have brought to Gov. Roosevelt. With the loss of California's delegates to the Chicago convention he suffers a setback that is decidedly more significant than the mere failure to add this support. Even the entry of former Gov. Smith in the "stop Roosevelt" movement did not halt the corralling of delegates by Gov. Roosevelt until the sweeping Smith victory in Massachusetts and his capture of support in Pennsylvania suddenly changed the complexion of the campaign.

California has been heralded as a pivotal State, particularly as it would affect Gov. Roosevelt. Until recently it was virtually conceded to him. The victory of Speaker Garner is not as decisive a feature of the result as the defeat of the New York governor. The speaker returns to the picture in the role of a possible compromise candidate, but Gov. Roosevelt's chances are definitely dimmed. The governor's hope of entering the convention with a following which might have insured his choice on an early ballot has probably been lost.

With the recent demonstration that Gov. Roosevelt was weak in the East it was all-important that his claim to strength in the South and West be sustained. The North-Western States that rallied to his support count few delegates in the convention, but if he had gathered in California's 44 it might have been difficult to stem the tide in his favor. The loss of them will doubtless have an equally unfavorable effect upon wavering States that are yet to select delegates.

Critical opponents who analyze Gov. Roosevelt's strength in delegates already pledged to him point out that much of it comes from States that will return no votes for a Democrat in the Electoral College. Others are unkind enough to claim that even Al Smith's victories are due more to Gov. Roosevelt's weakness than to inherent Smith strength. It is a mistake to attach too much importance to the vote of any one State, but at present it appears that the results in California make the Democratic race for the nomination a free-for-all.

THE STATES' PROBLEM.

The most notable decision arrived at by the Senate committee on unemployment insurance is to leave the problem to the States. Congress could not satisfactorily legislate on employment conditions because they differ so widely in each section of the country.

At first glance it may appear that the Senate committee is merely passing the buck to the States. But there is ample reason why Congress should avoid the subject, except to cooperate with the States by exempting unemployment reserves from taxation and extending encouragement in other ways for the stabilization of employment. There is a much better chance of keeping the whole question out of politics if it is handled entirely by the State legislatures. The experience of Congress with the bonus and other veterans' legislation confirms the wisdom of leaving unemployment insurance entirely to the States.

All members of the committee agree that the burden of supporting the unemployed should fall upon industry rather than upon public treasuries. That view is also fundamentally sound. The most vicious aspect of the unemployment insurance systems of Europe is the support of idle men from public funds. When contributions are made from the public treasury politics is infused into the insurance system, and it inevitably descends into a dole. There is no possible way of avoiding this corrupting and demoralizing influence, except by placing the entire burden upon industry itself.

It may be agreed that compulsory employment reserves are necessary to put any uniform system into operation. Without compulsory legislation and without the encouragement of public contributions very little stabilization could be anticipated. Each State, however, must work out that problem for itself. Conditions in the various States differ widely, and what is satisfactory in New York might be detrimental in Georgia.

Under any circumstances the stabilization of employment will require a long time. Laws requiring industry to set aside unemployment reserves at the present time might retard business recovery and work a great hardship upon the unemployed. Congress would do well definitely to hand over the unemployment problem to the States and industry so that they may chew upon it and be ready for constructive action when the dark clouds of depression begin to break.

THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

Owing to the numerous political parties in France and the requirement that a candidate receive an absolute majority of all votes cast in his district, only 248 members of the Chamber of Deputies, which has a membership of 615, were definitely elected on May 1. This number is about equally divided between the right wing supporters of Premier Tardieu and the left wing group, of which the Radical Socialists, led by M. Herriot, is the most important party.

The run-off election to decide the occupants of the remaining 367 seats in the chamber will be held next Sunday. In that contest only a plurality is required for final selection. Neither side has given up the contest, though there has been much speculation in France regarding the gains of the Radical Socialists and indications point to a victory for the Herriot forces.

This result is forecast not alone because of the number of left candidates who were leading, but not elected in the first balloting, but also because the Socialistic parties withdraw the weaker candidates in the secondary election to insure the choice of their strongest contestants, regardless of immediate party affiliation. M. Herriot may obtain sufficient strength in the new chamber so that his Radical Socialists will not find it necessary to make commitments to the Socialists as in 1922.

Between the government groups and the left are the Independent Radicals, who will support whichever side is in a position to form a government. If, as is expected, the Herriot party adds another 100 seats to its strength next Sunday, and the Socialists possibly 40 more, it is clear that Herriot will have by far the strongest party in the chamber and that he will be called upon to form a cabinet. He may pass the honor to Joseph Caillaux, who was Premier of the Radical Socialist government in 1922, or Caillaux may enter the cabinet as finance minister, as he is unquestionably the leading financier of his party.

Internationally, it is believed that the election will modify to a considerable degree the intensely nationalistic policy of France and contribute to more harmonious negotiations at both Geneva and Lausanne.

LIEUT. MASSIE PARDONED.

Disposition of the Massie case in Hawaii by a virtual pardon for the four defendants brings general satisfaction. The law proved to be flexible enough for the accomplishment of substantial justice. The defendants were guilty, but the punishment which had been heaped upon them before their crime was committed, justifies the commutation of their sentence to one hour.

Judge Davis did not act blindly in sentencing the four Americans to ten years' imprisonment. Gov. Judd had agreed to use his executive authority to secure their release before the sentence was passed. It is not clear why the judge imposed the maximum sentence when the jury brought in a plea for clemency, but that is a point of no importance in view of the understanding that the entire sentences would be reduced to one hour. A higher sense of justice superseded the law.

One fortunate result of this pardon is that it puts an end to the commotion over the case in Congress. It is far better that clemency should proceed from the Hawaiian government, even though the sentiment in this country was unquestionably a powerful influence in the decision of Gov. Judd.

A vital issue has been raised by this case. Hawaii has become known as a crime-ridden territory. The interest of Congress ought to be centered in an overhauling of the law which permits intolerable conditions in the islands. The crime which initiated this notorious case is only one of many that are committed in Honolulu because of corruption and inefficiency in the machinery of justice. A clean-up is in order.

To a weary Congress fagged with economy cuts, every little free junketing transport has a meaning all its own.

Not one American has escaped the depression, but each of the 125,000,000 has a remedy for it.

ATOMIC ENERGY

From the New York Times.

In a hundred university laboratories physicists are hammering atoms, hoping to solve the riddle of matter. The latest and most successful of these assaults is that made by Drs. Cockroft and Walton, of Cambridge, England. Their master, Rutherford, had broken down more than a dozen elements by bombarding their nuclei with high-speed alpha particles given off by radium and driving out hydrogen nuclei from all. This was as surely transmutation as if he had degraded mercury into gold. Cockroft and Walton reversed the process. Their bullets were hydrogen nuclei. By firing them at atoms of lithium they affected its nucleus strangely. A bullet was captured. The nucleus of the lithium atom then split. Out of it came two alpha particles. And the combined energy of these two is 16,000,000 volts — about 40 times the maximum voltage of the protons hurled against the lithium atom. It was as if a hidden spring had been touched and energy suddenly released. Somewhat similar results were obtained by Prof. Bothe when he bombarded beryllium with alpha particles from polonium and obtained energy in the form of rays almost as penetrating as cosmic radiation.

Cockroft and Walton themselves point out that they used up far more energy than they won—but only because they had to hurl millions of protons to score a single hit. Suppose that the bombardment could be controlled and that a rifle instead of a blunderbuss could be fired. Even then we should not be measurably nearer the utilization of atomic energy—a dream cherished since the opening of the century, when Rutherford gave us the modern atom with its nucleus, and electrons held together terrific forces. Millikan has pointed out that not by disintegration but by building atoms up can we obtain the energy we need. So he as well as Rutherford looks rather to the transmutation of hydrogen into helium—as yet a mere dream. We are no more able to design the machines that will make it possible to light a city with the energy contained in a thimbleful of lithium than the first savage who rubbed amber and extracted electric sparks from it was able to build a dynamo. We must understand the atom better if we are to build up matter and thus obtain energy, and to that understanding Cockroft and Walton have measurably contributed. At least we are wondering, which is in itself evidence of a scientific frame of mind. Even so cautious and eminent a physicist as Rutherford permits himself to wonder. Years ago he said, "The human race may trace its development from the discovery of a method of utilizing atomic energy."

"Chee, Maybe Dey Mean It!"

POST HASTE

When the American dollar slumps in Peruvian soles it ought to make the House take a tumble to itself.

Al Smith appeals to the party to repay Raskob the money spent on his defeat. That deceased equine is a stumbling block even to dark horses.

Brief synonym reference for discussion of legislative action: Irresponsible, unreliable, craven, recreant, cowardly, unaccountable, pusillanimous, blundering, faithless, perfidious, misrepresentative.

That the little nations in the league would decide that the big battleships of the big nations are offensive was as foregone as a decision of the world court.

The Goldsborough bill began very promptly to burrow under the gold standard.

"European nations back United States China policy." Sure; not only no outlay, but it saves them money.

By replacing economy cuts with more veteran benefits the House has done something constructive to aid and abet the depression.

There are some economic laws that have withstood a thousand attempts at nullification in the last thousand years, a fact which some legislators should verify.

The House has overlooked a confiscatory tax on stocks above par—there are still several left.

Who will be the first patriotic sleuth to discover that the latest decline of prices and the dollar is an international plot to discredit Congress?

Speaker Garner proves a stop-gap large enough to fill the breach between Smith and Roosevelt in California.

The House stands matchless and alone if it is proud of its 80 per cent cut in the economy bill.

JUST FOLKS

INDEBTED.

The interest on the mortgage on the house is overdue,
The grocer's writing letters threatening us that he will sue.
The plumber wants his money for a washer for a tap.
The Damsel Shoppe is dunning us for sister's evening wrap,
But the thing that worries mother till her face is wreathed in frowns,
Is the fact that w'ere indebted for a dinner to the Browns.

We haven't paid the doctor since the market went to smash.
The man who runs the laundry writes to say he needs some cash.
I owe the tailor something and I hate to catch his eye;
I always look the other way until he's traveled by;
But the thing that worries mother isn't money that she lacks,
But the fact that we're indebted for a dinner to the Blacks.

It is not for me to quarrel with the women and their ways;
They've a certain code of honor and from it no one strays.
Men may think their worries greater, but the social laws are stern,
And the dinner you've accepted is the meal you must return.
So I symphatize with mother as she lies awake o' nights,
Since for weeks we've been indebted for a dinner to the Whites.

There Is Adventure Here at Home for Those Young Enough to Risk It.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THIS is addressed to the boys of America who will finish high school this year.

It is assumed that you are 18 years old.

Three more years must pass before you will be citizens, possessed of a vote, and regimented in political parties to support candidates and causes chosen by the bosses.

That three-year period is your time of adventure. Being minors, you can "get away with" many things that adults could not do. And you will be free of many restraints that are imposed later by policy, custom and timid self-interest.

Have you a genuine desire and capacity for high adventure?

Are you game to tackle a job that requires courage, a level head, quick wit, discipline, loyalty, a sense of justice, good sportsmanship and the ability to hang on when the going is rough?

Then here it is.

There is much rottenness in America. The stables need cleaning. And the job requires an army of loyal citizens who will regard service to their country as the highest privilege and honor.

The only way to get an army of that kind is to recruit and train it. That is your job.

Organize a brigadee in your town or your ward. Choose officers to serve until they are 21—generals, colonels, captains, lieutenants, sergeants, corporals. Promote by merit only.

Choose some insignia, inconspicuous yet distinctive, that you will be proud to wear.

Let your motto be: Unselfish service; unfailing loyalty; courage, truth, obedience and fair play.

Take it seriously. Call your organization The Junior Guards of the State.

What will your job be? To clean up a nation and prepare to rule it.

Find fire traps and disease spots.

Find the property that dodges taxes.

Find the man who is taxed unfairly because he has no influence.

Find the victims of injustice, the weak who have no champion, the strong and evil who rule by fear.

Buy a mimeograph and print the truth you find—the simple facts, without comment or bias or favor.

You will find adventure in plenty. And without a particle of legal authority you can rule your community and make it worth inheriting—if you don't let oldsters use you to rake their chestnuts.

PRO AND CON

Pension Grabbers.

New York Herald Tribune.

Today, even more rapidly than after the Civil War, politicians have driven one breach after another through the war relief legislation, until what ought to be a system for the equitable recompense of those disabled in service, or for the support of those dependent upon men who sacrificed their lives, is becoming a system for political doles to people with no real claim upon the Government at all. It is becoming a system for the gratuitous support of a special class at the charge of the remainder of the country.

The thing has got to stop, for the simple reason that the Nation can not stand a continuance of this disastrous process. More than that, the jungle of existing pension legislation ought to be attacked. The tangled growths which already have distorted the whole purpose of the arrangement ought to be lopped off. For at present men who were shattered by enemy shellfire are no better cared for (and often cared for rather worse) than the political soldier whose nearest approach to a hero's death was when he fell off a street car in Salt Lake City. In justice to the men who actually fought and suffered, the whole structure of veterans' law should be returned to something like the original and just basis upon which the men who made the sacrifices were to receive the support. In the welter of political pension doles, they have become the "forgotten men."

Running Wild.

Minneapolis Journal.

Insurgency is running wild in the House of Representatives. Deserting their party leaders on both sides, a coalition majority of the members are permitting themselves to be led by demagogues and rattle brains into making a mess of well considered efforts to balance the budget.

On the first day of consideration of the economy committee's carefully planned project for cutting two hundred millions from the cost of government, the insurgent mob cut out more than a quarter of the planned savings and restored $55,000,000 to the tax bill the American people must pay.

These are the same congressmen who, the other day, after listening to the impassioned Jack Garner begging them to cooperate in putting across the job of balancing the budget, sprang to their feet in token of their promise to stand by.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Virginian Says Deficit Was Largely Created by Congress in Passing Bonus Bill Over Veto.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whatever doubt may have existed as to the real motive of the cry being made in Congress for the reduction of the salaries of Federal employees has now been definitely removed by the statement of Representative McDuffie that "unless we reduce these salaries there will be new faces here next session."

A statesman would have been expected to ask "is it necessary, is there no other means by which the budget can be balanced?" But the politician, interested primarily in his own future, wisely would ask, "Will I be reelected if I fail to reduce these salaries and thereby incur the displeasure of the voters back home who, although know nothing about these employees, their duties, their already meagre compensation, are clamoring for a reduction of their wages?"

Let the politicians keep on guessing. The voters will answer the question very decisively. It is my conviction that the next Congress will see "new faces" there, as it ought to.

Why should a congressman, who receives $10,000 per year for an average of six months work not be subjected to a much greater percentage reduction in his pay than the poor Federal employe who receives from $1,500 to $2,600 after having been in the service for a long number of years? I am not a Government employe, but I happen to know a large number of them, who are highly educated men and women. Scores among them are capable of representing their country in Congress just as efficiently as any representative is now doing.

Many of the congressmen who are now advocating the pay reduction of the already underpaid Federal employe in order, as they claim, to balance the budget, are the very men who helped to create the present deficit by recklessly voting for the veterans' bonus over the President's veto during the last session of Congress. But that was different. Such a vote then meant "support back home" by a well-organized body of men. Nothing, therefore, would be fairer than that this deficit, which is largely of their own making, should be met by reducing the pay of Congressmen, at least by a much larger percentage than is applied to the salary of the Federal employe.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRAT.

New York Correspondent Tells Congress of Economies in Aid of Misguided Public.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am very much interested in the economies for balancing the budget and have been waiting for them to start on Capitol Hill.

Would it not be in keeping with the times for our representatives in Congress to forego all their special privileges, such as overmileage, or, for that matter, abolish mileage altogether, as they are paid their salaries regularly and their constituents have to pay train fare? Just why they feel they are a privileged class it is hard to understand.

And how about the free barbering and the very large appropriation for stenographic work? Which of their constituents gets free barbering and an allowance for stenographers?

How about the marvelous baths that were put in for their special use? Why can't they use the bath-tubs in their hotels or boarding houses, or apartments, like their constituents have to do?

How did they come to get these special privileges?

Are their services commensurate with the additional salary that these special privileges add to their income? I doubt it. We have a very striking example at the moment—legislators insisting on bankrupting the Government for their own personal ends and preferring their own political safety to the welfare of the country. Why do the majority of the two houses look upon themselves as sacrosanct and entitled to spend the taxpayers' money for luxuries, &c., they never had in their lives until a misguided public sent them to Congress? SALLY CLAGETT.

Dr. Smith Says Canadian Tourists Spend Proportionately More in the United States.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read your editorial, "The Trek to Canada," which I think is very misleading and should be corrected. It leaves the impression that we are attracted to Canada on account of prohibition in the United States.

The figures you give are that in 1931 we spent $238,000,000 in Canada, while the Canadian tourists only spent $57,000,000 in the United States, but when we consider the fact that we have more than 12 times the population of Canada, we find that Canadian tourists are spending twice as much in the United States as we are in Canada.

Your editorials are, as a rule, very fair, and I think fairness calls for a correction of this editorial.

HENRY CLAY SMITH.

Long, of Louisiana, Should Resign From Senate, Says Virginia Democrat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The action of Senator Huey Long in resigning from all committees to which unfortunately he had been appointed will be cordially and gratefully received by all intelligent people. The only regret in the matter is that he was ever appointed to any of them in the first place.

While this resignation will be a source of great satisfaction to both Democrats and Republicans alike, he would render a still greater service to the country if he would now resign from the Senate.

LONG ILLNESS FATAL TO WIFE OF POLLARD

Several Members of Virginia Delegation in Congress to Attend Funeral.

Richmond, Va., May 4 (A.P.).—Mrs. John Garland Pollard, wife of the Governor of Virginia, died at 6:15 o'clock tonight at the mansion.

A sufferer for several years from arthritis, Mrs. Pollard's condition had grown worse in recent weeks and her death was not unexpected. Gov. Pollard spent most of the day at her bedside.

Although an invalid for twelve years and seldom able to take part in social activities, Mrs. Pollard was widely known in Richmond and throughout Virginia. Since the inauguration of her husband in 1930 she appeared with him at public functions at the mansion scarcely more than three times.

Mrs. Pollard's daughter, Sue, now Mrs. Herbert Lee Boatwright, acted in her mother's stead as official hostess.

Was Nature Lover.

A nature lover, Mrs. Pollard was responsible for beautifications in Richmond and in Williamsburg, where Dr. Pollard was dean of the Marshall Wythe School of Government and Citizenship at William and Mary College until he became governor. At her suggestion, dogwood trees were planted in sections of Richmond and Williamsburg, and other civic beautifications undertaken.

Under her supervision extensive improvements have been made to the garden at the executive mansion and boxwood and dogwood have been planted in the mansion garden.

Mr. Piccirilli as one of his best works.

Mrs. Pollard was born in Portsmouth, the daughter of Capt. C. T. Phillips, who distinguished himself as a Confederate officer at the battle of Gettysburg. Mrs. Pollard's mother was the former Miss Mary Hickman, of Hampton.

Devout Churchwoman.

She was graduated from the Norfolk College for Women, once a fashionable school, but which has been out of existence for 30 years.

Although inactive for several years, Mrs. Pollard was known as a devout churchwoman. In Richmond, where her husband practiced law for years and was attorney general during the administration of Gov. Stuart, she attended Grove Avenue Baptist Church, and took an active interest in foreign missions. She was president of the church's Woman's Missionary Society.

Later at Williamsburg, Mrs. Pollard became a member of Bruton Parish Episcopal Church.

She leaves two sons, Charles Phillips Pollard, a Washington attorney, and John Garland Pollard, jr., of Richmond, and one daughter, Mrs. Boatwright.

Funeral services will be held at the executive mansion at 11 o'clock Friday morning, with Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector of Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, officiating. Burial will take place in the Phillips family plot in Portsmouth at 3 o'clock.

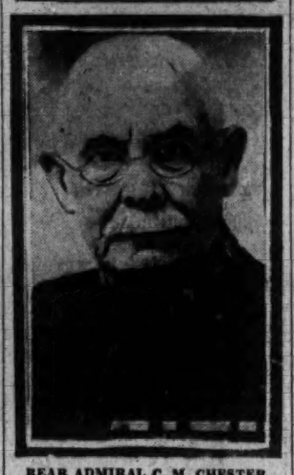
The family requested that no flowers be sent.

(Associated Press.)

Expressions of sympathy went out last night to Gov. Pollard of Virginia, when news of the death of Mrs. Pollard reached the Virginia congressional delegation.

Several members expect to attend the funeral services. Representative Montague, of Richmond, and Burch, of Martinsville, said they planned attending.

ADMIRAL DIES



REAR ADMIRAL C. M. CHESTER.

ADM. C. M. CHESTER IS DEAD IN RYE, N.Y.

Man Who Exploded Cook's North Pole Claims Will Be Buried in Capital.

Rear Admiral Colby Mitchell Chester, U. S. N., retired, last of Admiral Farragut's "boys," who was an ensign at the Battle of Mobile Bay, died yesterday at the home of his son, Arthur T. Chester, in Rye, N. Y.

Admiral Chester was the Navy's mathematical genius. It was he, who 24 years ago, took a pencil and a scrap of paper and punctured the claims of Dr. Frederick A. Cook to having discovered the North Pole.

Although 88 years old and the second oldest living graduate of the Naval Academy before his death, he had celebrated only 21 birthdays. He was born on February 29, 1844, at New London, Conn.

Admiral Chester made his home in Washington. In addition to his son, Arthur, he is survived by another son, Colby M. Chester, jr., who is president of the General Goods Corporation of New York.

He graduated from the Naval Academy in the class of 1863. He participated in the battle of Mobile Bay and the capture of Fort Morgan and Mobile during the Civil War.

He was commander in chief of the South Atlantic Squadron from 1897 to 1898, and later was engaged for fifteen years under President Roosevelt in establishing the open door in the Orient.

Funeral services will be held here in St. John's Episcopal Church at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning and burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

Cleveland News Executive Resigns.

Cleveland, May 4 (A.P.).—George F. He was connected with the News 18 years, having previously been president and general manager.

GEN. BIRMINGHAM DIES AT AGE OF 78

Former Head of Hospital at Soldiers' Home Will Be Buried Tomorrow.

Brig. Gen. Henry P. Birmingham, 78, U. S. A., retired, died yesterday in Walter Reed General Hospital after an illness of several weeks.

He served in the Indian War, the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, was with the Army of Occupation in Cuba and was in the World War.

He was retired in 1918, but was actively engaged as head of the hospital at the U. S. Soldiers Home for seven years after his retirement.

He is survived by two sons, Maj. R. C. Binrmingham, of Minneapolis, Minn., and William Birmingham, of Paris, France, and two daughters, Mrs. Everett Harman, of West Virginia, and Miss Clara Birmingham, of this city.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at Walter Reed Hospital Chapel, followed by interment in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

Heart Disease Fatal To Prof. McGowan

Member of Georgetown's Faculty Succumbs at Reading, Pa.

Prof. Peter McGowan, S. J., of the Georgetown College faculty, died at St. Francis Hospital, in Reading, Pa., after several weeks of illness with heart disease. After an attack in Washington, he went to Wernersville, Pa., for a short rest, but the condition became aggravated and he was taken to the hospital.

Prof. McGowan was a native of Philadelphia, and was born December 7, 1904. He joined the Jesuit order in 1922. After five years of study at both Oxford and Cambridge Universities, in England, he returned to the United States; and came to Georgetown last fall as assistant professor of Greek and Latin. At Oxford he had won several of the important Oxford prizes in these subjects. He had completed his course in philosophy and would have ended his theological course next September.

Funeral services will be held at Wernersville Saturday. He is survived by his mother, a brother and four sisters.

Army Man Loses Race With Death

Col. Penrose's Wife Dies on Train on Way to Meet Him Here.

Col. George H. Penrose, U. S. A., retired, of New York, failed by half an hour in seeing his wife before her death yesterday. Mrs. Katherine H. Penrose, 51 years old, had become seriously ill in Zelwood, Fla. She was placed aboard a train with a doctor and a nurse and Col. Penrose arranged to meet the train in Washington.

Mrs. Penrose died as the express train neared Quantico at 5:35 p. m. yesterday. The conductor of the train wired to Washington and the coroner made arrangements for the body to be moved so the train could proceed.

It was taken to the Tabler funeral home at 928 M street northwest. Col. Penrose will return with it to New York today. After his retirement from the Army, Col. Penrose became connected with the Chatham-Phoenix National Bank in New York.

Mrs. O. I. Jamieson Dies at Home Here

CAPPER SEES LAW OBSERVANCE AGAIN

Methodists Warn Nation's Officialdom to Support Prohibition.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 4 (A.P.).—United States Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, predicted at the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church tonight that the battle over prohibition would be fought in the future between "the big wet cities and the small dry cities, towns and rural folks."

On the general subject of law enforcement he remarked that "if the theft of the Lindbergh baby does not prove the turning point of a restoration of wholesome observance of law and order, I don't know what other atrocity will."

He reiterated his opposition to cancellation of interallied debts, excessive armaments and short selling of stocks, and laid a "great part of our distressing economic trouble" to Wall street and international bankers.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, reported on his work in combatting the "gambling mania" and public dance halls, in "protecting youth against cigarettes," and in blocking enemies of Sunday "blue laws."

Prohibition again occupied the limelight today as the conference voted unanimously to serve notice of its dry stand to the officialdom of the Nation.

The notice is contained in the prohibition section of the Episcopal message, which called for a "vigorous" and unmodified continuance of the eighteenth amendment, and which sharply criticized the repeal efforts of wealthy men and the asserted wet sentiment of the metropolitan press.

The recommendation prescribed a widespread distribution, and the delegates suspended rules to order the statement sent to President Hoover, all senators and representatives in Congress, and all presidential candidates and college presidents.

The prohibition statement, which is to be the first official report of the temperance committee to the conference, characterizes local option and Federal control modification plans as "absurd" and "repugnant."

Interest is centered in meetings of the committee of episcopacy, which will recommend the transfer of bishops.

What is generally considered the most desirable bishopric will be left vacant when Bishop McDowell, of Washington, D. C., retires at this conference. Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Chicago, has a large backing for the post.

The names of Bishop Herbert Welch, of Pittsburgh, and Bishop Charles W. Burns, of San Francisco, are being mentioned for transfer to the Boston diocese. Bishop William F. Anderson, present superintendent of the Boston area, will retire.

Bishop James C. Baker, whose present episcopate in Korea may be eliminated, has been mentioned as the successor in the St. Paul diocese of Bishop Charles E. Locke, who also is retiring.

Delegates regard the reappointment of Bishop Francis J. McConnell to the New York area as virtually assured. Several petitions have been received asking that he be continued there.

Another possible transfer is that of Bishop M. W. Claire, of the Lexington (Ky.) Conference, to Atlanta, Ga., to replace Bishop Fred T. Keeney.

The episcopacy committee also is considering changing the retiring age of bishops from 73 to 67 years of age and reducing episcopal salaries from $7,200 to $6,000 and expenses yearly

GOOD APPEARANCE IS ESSENTIAL

When a Man Plays Golf

—the mental and physical hazards of poor-appearing, poor-fitting clothes are a handicap he can easily overcome.

Look over the champions, the men who are making golf history—and notice that they are properly dressed, that their clothes, as a rule, are as near par as their game.

The Men's Store specializes in offering golf clothes and accessories that will help you play a better game—golf apparel designed by men who know the important part easily fitting, correctly cut "plus-4's" and slacks, sweaters, shirts, and shoes play in lowering your score.

Much of your business success depends on making a favorable first impression

Slacks and Knickers, $7.50 each

Flannel slacks are becoming very popular. Tweeds and cheviots fresh from the mills make these "plus-4's." (Other golf knickers, $5 to $10.)

Pull-Over Sweaters, $5

In small fancy weaves, rather than the plainer weaves of earlier seasons . . . and many golfers are showing a preference for sleeveless pullovers. (Other sweaters, $3.50 to $18.) Matching golf hose, $2 (others, $1 to $4).

Collar-Attached Shirts, $2.50

"All Sports" Golf Shoes, $8.50

This model made by Abbott, producers of Sportocasins, will be comfortable even though you "go 'round" three or four times in one day. Sportocasins, $12.50 . . . and The Men's Store is Washington headquarters for these famous sports shoes.

So Much More

Price is important, of course, but of far greater importance is the value you get for every dollar you invest in an electric refrigerator.

A Kelvinator De Luxe or Standard Model costs more than ordinary electric refrigerators because it is better, it costs more to build, is better constructed and is made of finer materials. It is worth more.

Think of the many extra conveniences and advantages of fully automatic operation (an exclusive Kelvinator feature); 4-Zones of Cold; World's Fastest Freezing; the Frost Chest; the Kold-Keeper; the Kelvin Crisper, and others that make a Kelvinator so completely satisfactory, so economical, and so dependable.

The difference in cost actually amounts to only a few cents a day. But the difference in performance, in number of years of service, and in the satisfaction you get out of your Kelvinator is worth many times this few cents a day.

It is extravagance to buy anything but the best—especially when the best costs so little more in the first place, and gives so much more, for a far greater number of years.

Unquestionably, you'll be better satisfied with a Kelvinator and you'll get much more for your dollar. Come in and see for yourself.

IMPORTANT

Whether your final choice is a Kelvinator or some other electric refrigerator, select a model that is large enough for your future as well as present needs. And since an electric refrigerator is a long-time investment, choose one that is manufactured by a reliable company, with proper experience in the refrigeration field. "Orphan" products of any kind are poor investments. And the cheapest product becomes the most expensive if it fails to perform the service for which it was bought.

Mrs. Eleanor Davis was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Elena Hannigan, of College Park, Md.; Miss Emily Storr, of Raleigh, N. G. O. P. LEADERS HIT AT SEABURY HEARING

State Senator in New York Says Expose Would Shock Nation.

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—Mayor Walker was pictured to the Hofstadter investigating committee today as the prime advocate of granting a franchise whereby an Ohio corporation would have gained a virtual monopoly over all surface transportation in New York City.

Borough President Henry Bruckner, of the Bronx, appeared at a public hearing to testify that the mayor's insistent pleading of the case of the Equitable Bus Corporation, controlled by the Fageol Motor Co. and the General Tire & Rubber Co., led to "dissension in Democratic party councils in 1927."

George W. Olvany, then leader of Tammany Hall, supported the mayor in his efforts to give the Equitable a city-wide permit, he said, while other party chieftains favored dispensing separate franchises to "home concerns." The bus company was approved by the board of estimate, but the State transit commission balked the deal.

State Senator John A. Hastings, who has been called "the political contact man" between the Equitable and the Ohio group, gave out another statement in which he charged that Counsel Samuel Seabury is "ready to destroy the Democratic party of this State, which renounced him, and it's Democratic chances for success in the Nation."

"Were the President of the United States amenable to subpena, and the conversations between Seabury, Macy and Mr. Hoover disclosed, a story of political scheming and intrigue, and the motive behind this persecution would be exposed that would shock the Nation for its daring, audaciousness and ruthlessness." W. Kingsland Macy is chairman of the State Republican committee.

Skin Test Used to Guard Toilers From Chemicals

Pasadena, Calif., May 4 (A.P.).—Introduction of new chemicals in manufacturing, Dr. Moses Schultz, Los Angeles dermatologist, said today, has developed in workmen a series of new skin diseases and a susceptibility treatment known as the "patch test."

Dr. Schultz, a speaker at the California Medical Association convention, said the patch test allows proper selection of workers for various trades and constitutes at present the best preventative of industrial skin diseases.

"The test," he said, "consists of bits of paper or material which have been treated with chemicals used in the plant in which the workers are employed. These are applied to the skin."

The reaction of the skin, Dr. Schultz said, can be noted within a short time, whereas under normal working conditions such a reaction might not appear for months.

MIAMI JURY VIEWS CASE OF DEAD FLIER

Murder Indictment Sought for Capt. Lancaster, Who Maintains Innocence.

Miami, Fla., May 4 (A.P.).—A grand jury tonight had under consideration the evidence which State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne asks a murder indictment against Capt. W. N. Lancaster, former British flier, for the death of Haden Clarke, fiance of his noted flying partner, Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller.

Clarke, a young writer, was shot to death in the room he shared with Lancaster at the home of Mrs. Keith-Miller here, shortly after Lancaster's return to Miami after being notified Clarke and Mrs. Keith-Miller planned to be married.

Both the fliers called the death a suicide, but suicide notes found with the body were called forgeries by a handwriting expert, and the prosecutor said he had obtained Lancaster's admission that he wrote them to avoid suspicion for himself and Mrs. Keith-Miller.

Lancaster expressed regret that he was not permitted to appear before the grand jury. He said he was confident he could explain the circumstances which he admitted were against him.

He expressed a wish also to conduct his own case if he should come to trial on a murder charge.

"I know that is not possible," he said, "but I know I can convince twelve reasonable men that I am innocent of shooting that boy."

He declined to say what course the defense, for which he was laying his own plans, would take.

Hawthorne said the grand jury probably would not act before Saturday.

Meanwhile Lancaster is held in jail under a murder charge filed by Hawthorne.

Lancaster's pistol, found under Clarke's body after he was shot as he lay in bed, was taken to the grand jury room. The pistol was purchased by Lancaster in St. Louis prior to his return here.

Fearful that her statements will prove a boomerang to her flying partner, Mrs. Keith-Miller today began preparing a defense for Capt. Lancaster.

Lancaster Called "Modest."

"I am afraid the things I have said, and that he has said, to show our firm conviction that Haden took his own life, will be interpreted in the end to show that he was killed," she declared.

"I want to be sure that the things that are fine about Bill will be brought out. In a mess like this, there seems to be no chance for good things to be told. He is too modest to tell them, but if he is to get a square deal, they must be brought out."

Lancaster's attorney visited him in his cell for a short time today, but a scheduled visit by Mrs. Keith-Miller, under special permission granted her, did not take place. Instead, she devoted her day to working on his defense.

Dentist's Eye Injured As Forceps Drop Tooth

BABY BOY ADOPTED BY MIRIAM HOPKINS

Blonde Stage and Film Star, Divorcee, Is Irate Over Publicity.

Chicago, May 4 (A.P.).—Miriam Hopkins, blonde stage and movie actress, was aboard a New York bound train today, playing a new role, mother to an adopted baby boy, which she selected yesterday from the Cradle, an Evanston orphanage.

She disappeared so quickly and in such a huff after the adoption proceeding that no one was able to determine if she had her new son with her.

In answering questions necessary to the infant's legal adoption, the screen and stage star revealed in court that she and her playwright husband, Austin Parker, were divorced. They had separated about a year ago.

Discovery of her plan to adopt a child and the resulting publicity peeved the actress, and after adoption papers were signed she dashed out of Judge Edmund K. Jarecki's court, declaring she didn't want to talk about it or anything else for that matter.

"I hate all this publicity over a simple thing. I don't have to give any reason," she said to a reporter who asked why she wanted to adopt a baby. "It is just a fact, and we will live wherever I happen to be working."

In court she told the judge she would rear the child as her own and had already set aside a trust fund for it. She testified she was unmarried.

All that could be learned about the baby was that it was "Boy Wilson."

RELIEF PLEA MADE FOR JEWS ABROAD

Meeting Held at Center to Spur Action in $50,000 Aid Campaign.

The work of rebuilding the Jewish Homeland in Palestine must go on despite world economic conditions, Rabbi Wolf Gold, a leader in the National Mizrachi Society, told a large audience last night at the Jewish Community Center.

"Nothing undertaken by American Jews to relieve the condition of their brethren abroad is as far-reaching as the settlement of the Jews in Palestine," he said. "What has been accomplished in Palestine is the greatest social reconstruction project of out times. For ten years American Jews have given liberally to help build. To stop now would result in the wreckage of thousands of lives and destroy the opportunities of building the Jewish National Home, upon which Jews place so much hope for their spiritual future."

Rabbi Gold stressed the work the Mizrachi organization is doing in establishing Hebrew schools throughout the Jewish colonies. Rabbi Gold appeared here under the auspices of the united Jewish campaign. Half of the funds raised in the $50,000 drive, which opened here Monday, will be devoted to Palestine and the remainder to relief of Eastern European Jews.

Women workers in the drive will attend a tea this afternoon at the Jewish Center. Mrs. Charles Rosenthal, chairman of the woman's division, will act as hostess. Tonight the men workers in the drive will organize their forces at the center. Morris Garfinkle and Louis E. Piegler will speak.

More Powerful than Any Gasoline

The new high-compression motors call for the best motor fuel—Esso. These high-compression motors have reduced clearances. This increases their tendency to knock and means more carbon removal jobs—unless you use Esso. The saving on the cost of one carbon job will more than pay for the extra price on a year's use of Esso.

Esso—consistently used—prevents unexpected repair bills due to gummed-up valves, sulphur or other corrosives.

As to performance, give Esso any test for quick starting, acceleration or power against any other fuel and Esso wins.

Whether you think first of your motor or first of your pocketbook, it pays to use Esso.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

Comfortable Feet Prevent Facial Lines and Wrinkles.

As your face registers all foot discomfort, let's care for the feet as a preventive measure. Few things cause as many little irritations as an ill fitting shoe, and the worst shoe fault lies in having it too short. It may be too short from the heel under the arch to the great toe joint, or it may be too short from the great toe joint to the end of the toes. When having shoes fitted, make sure that the normal bulge, the side of the great toe joint, comes exactly at the widest part of the shoe sole. If this bulge comes even a quarter of an inch above or below, refuse to take the shoe. It doesn't fit. If the shoe has to be forced on the foot, it doesn't fit. It is either too narrow or the wrong shape. The shoe must be long enough and wide enough across the ball of the foot to allow an easy flexing of the foot. To allow you to step up and down stairs by placing your weight first on the ball of the foot, and upon the heel. See that the edge of the shoe sole is visible on both sides. If the foot bulges over the sole, it will be irritating and the shoe will quickly lose its shape. Never wear too tight straps or vamps which press so tightly that they cause swelling on top of the feet. It is injurious, and is in exceedingly poor taste.

Corns and Callouses.

One should not have them in this day and age. But if you are so afflicted, take a first treatment from an up-to-date chiropodist, if there is one within reach. If not, try this treatment: Warm soapy baths, as cold water is not sufficiently softening. Immediately after the hot bath, remove as much calloused skin as possible by scraping with the edge of a nail file. Then scrub with a dry Turkish towel. Use a safety razor blade to trim off thin bits of the corns. Only try to take a thin shaving, and avoid making the place bleed. Do not try this except when the feet are moist from the bath, and wet the corn with a disinfectant both before and after trimming. Finish with a rub of softening cream.

Foot Exercise.

With your feet bare, walk around your bedroom on tiptoes. Then stand still and rise up and down on tiptoes twenty times. Sit down, grasp one toe at the time between thumb and forefinger and wiggle it around in all directions. Especially try to pull the great toe out to increase the space between the toes, and prevent them lapping. It is astonishing to note the difference this will make in a few weeks. Nice, straight, flexible toes instead of crowded, crooked ones. And as your toes uncurl your nerves seem to uncurl and relax. Your feet are used so much and get so little rest that they deserve consideration. If they don't get it, they protest, and make their marks upon your face in lines and wrinkles.

Elsie Pierce, famous beauty lecturer, will answer any questions on beauty you wish to ask her. Address Miss Pierce, in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

How Do They Turn Out?

DEAR Frances McDonald—I have just finished reading the letter from "Nearly Twenty-five," which was published in your column, and in reading this letter am reminded of my young brother, who has tried as hard as this girl to do the right thing, but circumstances always have been against him. He was the youngest of my mother's five children, and my father died when he was a baby. He always took our poverty more seriously than the rest of us and stayed at home until my mother married again and had a good home. Then he educated himself by going to college; then the first girl was getting along and got tired of waiting until he could make a better home for her and his children. He finished his course in accounting, studying and working his way along. He left the small town where he had made a home for my mother, and lived in Washington. He had a good position in an office and fell in love with a stenographer, whom everyone thought perfect to find. She was living with an Army officer who had a wife and two children. He helped the girl return to her people in the West and the Army officer to his wife. I know he was in love with the girl, and never was other than a perfect gentleman to her. She later married and he went to New York. He has a good position and doing very well, but very lonesome, as he had always lived with my mother, or in my house.

In New York he met a married woman who did not live with her husband. He helped her for three years, as he helped to get a divorce from her husband. She was a plain gold-digger is what I concluded; anyway I am sure he did his part to the best of his ability. Now please don't think he is a "mama's" and "sister's" pet boy, because he is not. I have a home, husband and children, and he had an awfully hard time while with my mother. Had to support her, help a sister through school, and educated himself. He always worked hard for all he has.

After returning home from New York he was pathetic; his health was completely shattered. Well, to make a long story short, we have helped lots and he has done all he could, and he is well now and has a good Government position. In your experience do girls like the one who wrote this letter turn out well? How could my brother meet her? Do tell me what you think. ANXIOUS SISTER.

In our experience people with character go through life with heads up and it makes little difference how they achieved character. Some are born with character, some stumble upon it and some have it painfully thrust upon their attention.

There are girls whose character is never even tested. They live, marry, and die all on schedule, with never a slip of any sort in the nicely planned program. Lovely, but no one knows what might have been.

There are other girls who contact every sort of inducement to throw reason, law, and order to the four winds. Loneliness, poverty, even hunger, rise up and mock them. And yet they come through colors flying. That takes character.

There are still others bewildered by life, deceived by love, who take to tears and disillusionment, but find character after the clouds roll by. Which would you say was more equal to face life? The untempted whose strength no one can know, or the one who has learned and profited by her lesson?

If you meet "Nearly Twenty-five" it is our guess you will meet a girl who has character and plenty of it and a girl who should completely forget the past and live in the future. We are trying now to locate her and will forward to her your letter as soon as she sends us her address.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Adorable bed jackets! Right above: Mauve velvet with shirred collar and cuff. Left: Nile green chiffon which ties on with pink grosgrain ribbons. Left below: Tiny capelet of rose-colored velvet ribbon pleated to look like petals. (Dahray ideas).

NEW YORK, May 4.—The humble bed jacket is coming into its lovely own at last! One can't wonder, seeing how far it has progressed since the knitted "comfort" we used to be obliged to wear when we had measles 'n' things when we were children!

For there is a definite need for something to cover bare arms and shoulders in bed. Nightgowns with wee barest sleeves or more often simply shoulder straps for sleeves instead, are far from comfortable to read in before going to sleep, let alone to have breakfast in bed in mornings. And no lovely lady fails to read at least one beautiful thought before "her eyelids flutter down over her sleep-filled eyes, like tremulous wings of weary butterflies." Even if modern days seldom allow her the luxury of breakfast abed in the morning.

Then, too, today's bed jackets are as lovely almost as evening wraps! Certainly as flattering, and certainly as necessary. One should have several, varying weights and lengths of sleeves for different night gowns and different weathers. A velvet bed jacket, for instance, made of very, very fine uncrushable velvet, lined with lightweight cotton flannel, not silk—and with huge shirred collar and cuffs, is for colder nights or mornings. I have designed such a one—and, ah-h-h-h-h, if you want to put a chiffon lining on over the cotton flannel lining one, you could wear it for an occasional evening jacket!

The little one I designed and sketched at the left is one that matches the night gown with which it is to be worn, in material and ribbon trimming—the nightie has to have a ribbon girdle like that, as well as straps. And this little bed comfort just ties on like a waist, with a bow in the front!

Then the rose petal one illustrated at the lower right—can't you just see a lovely sick-a-bed lady's face emerging from this bouquet of rose leaves—denying, as a lovely lady should, her indisposition? For the velvet ribbon, rows 'n' rows of it, is gathered on to resemble petals—and the very last row would have to be green. This capelet can be as long as you wish, of course, or as short. Any pastel color will be lovely.

How are those three for bed jackets moderne?

"Mother, please can't I have a pyjama suit like Rosemary's? All the girls are wearing them now." "But darling, you know what happened to the suit I bought you last month. It was so expensive and the first time it was laundered it shrank and faded so you couldn't wear it any more. Now, don't look so woebegone—I'll see what I can do about making you a suit." And if mother is lucky she will see what we have for this week's leaflet, and if she's wise she'll sit right down to her desk and send for this week's leaflet, which is hers for a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to the Dare Department of The Washington Post. Voila! She will then have complete instructions for making not only a simple and adorable pyjama suit but also a play suit for "after school" and sun suits for the wee ones!

Some little fashion notes of importance for summer are: Novelty peau d'ange, printed, embroidered and in odd weaves. I am sorry, because peau d'ange, being as it was flat and smooth and dull like suede, was as lovely as it could be like that—but I somehow can't see it gilded as the lily. Checked gingham blouses. Darling little things—and so very youthful and quaint, not to mention chic, when worn with a tailored summer skirt!

Au revoir.

Helping the Homemaker

By NANCY CAREY

DEVILED CRABS MAIN DISH FOR FRIDAY'S MENU.

THIS is the birthday of my little grandmother, with whom I lived for long years, up through the lisping stage and into my pigtailed era and then on through the first long dresses and my "young lady" days. She is no longer with us, for it is the sorry part that our grandmothers, being of a generation twice removed, must leave us far too soon; leave us, indeed, just when we have come to a full realization of their preciousness, kindliness and foresight; leave us just as we come to know how valuable has been the guidance of their firm but gentle hand. I remember Dick so well—yes, amazingly, I called her that—despairing of my abilities to "organize myself during the young lady period." Although for many years others had cared for her home under light but astute supervision, she was an excellent housekeeper. And she despaired of me, for she felt, and so justifiably, that girls were born to the realm of the home and boys to the realm of business, and that each should be well equipped for the duties to come.

Here was a faith in the home as the core of all things fine, and hers a faith, too, in the heart of each woman with her own floor to sweep, her lamp to light, come evening, and her row of much-read books to dust, come each day's morning. I have always wished she might have known that through the years her simple faith that I would somehow learn to tidy my house of life has borne its fruitage. I am a homemaker now. Surely it was because of Dick's hope for me that this little column of ours has carried this title these many years. In a true sense this is far more hers than mine, this little column, for it is she who builded the homemaker in my spirit. I can not go today to find the answer to my question, but it is my hope that on this, her birthday, my little bush of rambling roses flowers as sweetly and as gayly where she rests as does my memory of the gentle woman sleeping near them.

And now to build again a plan for our day's endeavors, our marketing for the morrow, our baking and brewing, to the end of a splendid Friday repast upon our board tomorrow evening.

FRIDAY'S DINNER.

Deviled Crabs
French Fried Potatoes
Scalloped Tomatoes
Coleslaw
Lemon Jelly
Small Cakes
Coffee

Cream of Scallop Soup

1 pound scallops
2 tablespoonfuls butter
4 teaspoonfuls flour
Salt and pepper to taste
Dash of paprika

Parboil the scallops in the milk, then drain. Return scallops to the saucepan, add the butter and sprinkle with flour. Cook until flour and butter are blended, then pour in the milk, in which the scallops have been cooked. Stir constantly until the consistency of cream. Garnish with whipped cream and serve.

Deviled Crabs.

Crab shells

Fill shells, piling meat high. Cover with crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven ten to fifteen minutes. Deviled crabs may be dipped in egg and dry breadcrumbs and fried in deep fat until golden brown.

French Fried Potatoes.

Allow the peeled potatoes to stand in cold water from 30 to 45 minutes, according to whether they are sliced or whole. Drain and wipe very dry and drop in hot fat—about 395 degrees. A frying basket may be used in cooking. Drain on absorbent paper, sprinkle with salt and serve hot.

Coleslaw.

Shave one head of cabbage fine. Crisp in cold water without salt. Dry on cheesecloth or absorbent paper towels. Mix with dressing made as follows:

¼ cupful vinegar
1 teaspoonful dry mustard
1 teaspoonful sugar
¼ teaspoonful salt
Dash of cayenne pepper
2 tablespoonsful flour
1 egg
¾ cupful milk
2 tablespoonfuls butter

Mix dry ingredients, add egg slightly beaten, then scald the milk. Pour over the egg mixture. Cook over hot water until thick, add butter and lastly the vinegar very slowly. Cool and chill before serving.

"TAURUS."

IF May 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 a. m. to 11 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. and from 8:15 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8:30 a. m. and from 6 p. m. to 7:40 p. m.

Astrological influences on May 5 will help to prepare the way for the reception of new ideas or the launching of new enterprises. Initiative and nerve will go a long way on this date for most battles will be won before they are begun. Hesitating lovers will find themselves engaged to the idol of their hearts.

Although not uncomfortably restless, children born on this May 5 will be full of chatter, movement and dancing. They will give out a great deal of love and friendliness, and will receive a great deal in return. They may want their jam before their bread, but the bread and butter side of their character will always be in evidence.

You, if born on May 5, and your immediate horoscopical predecessor are not peas out of the same pod. You are a stolid, matter-of-fact being with a great sense of duty and possess a conscience that never takes a vacation. You are not too much the vegetable to experience emotions, but yours never exhaust you. You ask very little of life, but that little you intend to get. You do not believe much in chopping and changing, and the blue-prints of your life show few erasures and changes.

You are not a speed artist, but your lumbering gait gets you further and faster in the long run than many of your associates who travel on a higher gear. You have fewer and less severe breakdowns, and you have time to take everything in which is of interest or of use. You like to do things in your own way and your own time, and are unfriendly toward meddlers. You are unduly sensitive to criticism, which you take very much to heart.

If you be a woman, you frown on any taint of unconventionality, and are rather stiff in your social contacts. You can be very happy alone, and at times feel that you must escape from human contacts and demands. You will agree with Shakespeare that love pricks like a thorn.

Advice on Gardening

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

FOR the last three years my white narcissus have developed buds which have dried up. The ones that do open normally are very late, usually about the first of May. Please explain the reason for this condition.

MISS M. LOUISE W.

Narcissus do best in a loam which contains four ounces of bonemeal to each square yard of space, and in places where the soil is light a liberal dressing of wood ashes to each square yard is recommended. These fertilizers should be applied annually in the autumn. The earlier the narcissus are planted in the autumn, the better chance there is of their doing well. Your bulbs are likely overcrowded. Better, some time during the summer, lift them and after you have added sufficient fertilizer, replant them. August is the best month to do this work.

What is the best time to plant perennials and when should they be lifted and transplanted? Please also tell me what causes the leaves of asparagus springerii to turn yellow and brown. AN OLD READER.

Some say it is best to prepare the border in the fall, leaving the soil rough and subject to the freezing action during the winter, after which it may be leveled and planted in the spring. With the exception of the most tender perennials, early fall planting is advisable. However, it depends on the variety just when a perennial should be planted. In the autumn the soil works more easily than in the spring, and retaining its summer warmth induces root action. Late fall planting is to be avoided because the plants should be thoroughly established before freezing weather sets in. Plants with evergreen foliage are best moved in the spring, as are all less hardy varieties. Lack of sun, fresh air or water may be responsible for the leaves of an asparagus turning yellow and falling off. Again, the plant may be suffering from lack of food or root room. An asparagus springerii must have water every day and have an abundance of fresh air and plenty of root room. Try transplanting your plant, using rich soil.

When may I lift some English wallflowers to give to a friend? Also, when can I transplant some Oriental poppies? LAURA A. W.

Wallflowers may be transplanted at any time in the early spring. When the rains begin coming in September, the roots of Oriental poppies begin to show signs of growth. It is at this time that the plants can be safely transplanted. It is a pity you have to move them, for after they are once established they should not be moved or disturbed as they do not take kindly to change.

Please tell me how to plant and care for a passion flower. Is this a hardy vine? MRS. L. J. D.

The passion flower, passiflora incarnata, is the State flower of Tennessee. This species is hardy as far north as New York City. Passiflor pfordti is the best variety for outdoor use as a summer climber. While you can grow the passion flower from seed, the germination is uncertain and very slow. You can also propagate it from cuttings which may be rooted in sand in early spring. This passion flower is hardy only in the extreme South.

What can be done to prevent the effects of blight on hollyhocks or phlox? MRS. THOMAS F.

Never plant either variety in soil until you are sure it is free from disease. Spray the plants before growth starts in the spring and give two later applications at intervals of ten days apart. Bordeaux mixture is the proper spray to use for blight. Some growers prefer to dust lime and sulphur under the leaves. Usually this will prevent a serious outbreak. Badly infested plants should be dug and burned.

How to Keep Well

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

FEEDING BABIES AND MOTHERS AS WELL.

MOTHERS know about as much as they need to about feeding of babies six to twelve months of age. The sickness rate from digestive disturbances in babies of this age is very low. Furthermore, it is falling so evenly and continuously that we can trust the natural course of events to take care of whatever need arises.

The same can not be said of babies less than six months of age, and particularly of those less than a month old. Since nearly all young babies are breast fed, the need is for a different diet for nursing mothers.

Dr. S. Maurer, who has been working on this question for years, is of the opinion that the source of great harm is a dietary deficiency in vitamin B complex. Since this group of vitamins is not stored in the body, he thinks that all child-bearing women should eat plenty of these foods at all times. They should increase their intake of them during pregnancy and especially during the last half thereof, and they should continue them at least as long as they are breast feeding.

Furthermore, when babies less than 6 months old are weaned, foods rich in this vitamin should be included in the diet. When a baby is born it is expected that he will eat no food or get practically little values from what he eats during the first three days of life, and not very much during the remainder of the first week of life. Since vitamin B complex is not stored in the body, babies do not start life with enough of this vitamin stored to last three days or a week. This is one reason why so many babies die when less than a week old and for no definite reason. Somehow they seem not to get a good start or a good hold on life.

The best source of this vitamin is the germ of grains, though yeast is about in the same class. However, there are many other foods that supply the deficiency and we are far from being without choice.

A standard diet for an adult that supplies the minimum amount of this vitamin required is given by Davidson and Gulland, as:

3 ounces orange juice.
4 ounces apples.
16 ounces milk.
1 ounce butter.
Whole meal bread.

Changes in an ordinary diet to make it adequate in this vitamin as set forth by Dr. Goldberger are:

Butter from .6 ounce to 1.5.

Wheat flour decreased from 14.4 to 12.9.

Cornmeal increased from 5.3 to 6.3.

Lard and substitutes decreased from 1.4 to 1.2.

The principal changes that Dr. Goldberger asked for were increases in fresh meats, salt pork, eggs, and fresh fruits.

If the mother will eat a fair amount of yeast or foods made from it, and grain germs, or foods made from them, she can get along with less of some of these items.

GETS RID OF CANKERS.

R. N. writes: Until ten months ago I was a frequent sufferer from canker sores on the gums. They were so painful that I had to go to a dentist for treatment. However, in a short time I would be troubled again. I tried eliminating certain foods to discover the cause but that did not help. A friend who had been troubled as I was highly recommended chlorozene. I inquired of my dentist and he spoke highly of it. I dissolved one tablet in an ordinary sized glass of water and use it as a mouth wash. I have not been troubled since. A stronger solution may be used if necessary.

STOCKINGS DO THE TRICK.

G. L. P. writes: Why are some opposed to the wearing of elastic stockings in the treatment of phlebitis of the leg?

These have afforded me the greatest relief over a period of years. It is only when the stockings lose their elasticity and my legs are deprived of this support that they become inflamed.

REPLY.

I do not know.

THE PENALTY DOUBLE OF A BID OF ONE.

HAND No. 8 of the World Bridge Olympic series, which was played simultaneously throughout the world in April, was an illustration of the stinging penalty sometimes suffered on an apparently sound Overcall bid. This hand was not designed to prove that Overcalls of Opening bids should not be made, for otherwise the defending hands would surrender to those who had opened the bidding one of their most effective weapons at the Contract table, but it did portray vividly the dangers inherent in the distribution of 52 cards to four players around the table.

The hand and bidding were:

North—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
		1♡(1)	1♠(2)
Dbl.(3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North opens with a bid of one in his higher ranking four-card suit.
2—East's hand calls for an Overcall of one spade, even though he is vulnerable. The disastrous outcome is one of those misfortunes which can not be guarded against.
3—South's hand calls for an immediate Penalty Double. This apprises partner of the character of his hand and promises a much bigger score than playing the hand at any declaration of his own.

In the play of this hand, North and South must both be alert to take full advantage of the favors showered upon them by the gods of distribution. The first play requires North, whether or not the Queen of hearts has been played from Dummy, to overtake the heart Knave, in order to provide an additional entry into his hand. If the full extent of the disaster, which East faces, is to be capitalized by the defending players, North must be in the lead as often as possible. His purpose, therefore, in winning the first heart trick, is to lead a trump, as a study of his own holding, and the Dummy discloses that South's Penalty Double must have been based upon great length in the trump suit, and probably a tenace holding as well. Therefore, in order to prevent East from throwing South in the lead when he has only trumps in his hand, North must protect his partner, if possible, against such a course. If East finesses, South, of course, wins, and returns another heart, which North wins and leads a diamond. South wins the diamond with the Ace, and exits from his hand with the last diamond.

Thus played, East should be penalized 4 tricks, a penalty of 1,400 points at a contract of one.

Most players failed to realize the full trick-taking possibilities of their cards, and some East players escaped with a penalty as light as 600, and many were beaten only 1,000.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Penalty Doubles, even of low bids, are frequently extremely profitable, due to freaks of distribution. This does not suggest that overcalls should not be made, but does indicate the lurking dangers in the peculiarities of distribution.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play in the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

East—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

OUNCIL HEARS BUS PROTESTS TONIGHT

ommittee of Commuters to Ask Repeal of Alexandria Ordinance.

E WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A special meeting of the city council will be held at 8 o'clock tonight, hen a special committee representing the Alexandria Commuters Association will urge the repeal of the dinances recently adopted, designated as Ordinance No. 15, which ecifies the route to be taken by erstate and intrastate bus lines thin the corporate limits or passing through Alexandria.

Under this ordinance, which bemes effective May 15, only one bus ne, the A. B. & W. line, owned and perated by Robert L. May, would be ermitted to handle passenger traffic etween points within the corporate mits, and the competing line, nown as the Blue Line, could handle only traffic between Alexandria d Washington, and operate only the same route as buses passing rough the city. The A. B. & W., or d Bus line, would be permitted to le with the council a statement of e route it desired to follow.

Public sentiment against the ordiance took definite form last Saturay night in a mass meeting held in e Maury School building, when solutions were adopted asking the peal of the offending ordinance, d petitions signed by approximate- 3,00 persons will be presented to e council tonight, making a similar quest. The resolution adopted turday night asks that the council ace all competing bus lines on an ual footing as to routes and schedes.

Mr. May stated yesterday that either he nor his attorney had any owledge of Ordinance No. 15 until ter its adoption on April 21, alough he is firmly convinced that t ordinance of a similar character ll be found necessary if suitable d adequate transportation and minal facilities are to be furnished tween Alexandria and Washington r any length of time.

The committee to present the Comuters Association's side of the conoversy tonight is composed of Harry Kennedy, chairman; Harry H. Newn, William F. Brooke, E. C. Davison, arry R. Burke, Charles M. Sheppern, Mrs. Charles Astryke, Mrs. E. O. mith, of the original resolutions mmittee, and Louis P. Woodward d John Nugent, of the First Ward; udge Louis C. Barley, Second Ward; arvey S. Janney, Third Ward; icholas J. Lawler and Frank T. uinn, Fourth Ward; Harold Abbey d W. S. Adams, Fifth Ward, and harles E. Burgess and T. E. Dolan, ixth Ward.

The Alexandria police force will be ncreased on May 12, the day of the edication of the George Washington asonic National Memorial Temple, om 32 members to 271, by the addion of members of the local volunr fire department, the Washington olice department, Boy Scouts and villians.

There will be 34 members of the ashington force assigned here; 80 embers of the local fire department, ho already are vested with police owers, will be on duty; 37 men will nd the ropes stretched across street tersections, and 88 Boy Scouts will d traffic enforcement.

Partition suits have been filed in e circuit court of Alexandria for e division of acreage property, of ch William H. Duncan, former erk of the Arlington County court, part owner. The land involved in e of the suits comprises 111 acres d is located on the Leesburg turnke. This suit is filed in behalf of eorge E. Garrett, Charles T. Jesse, obert Dye, William C. Gloth, B. M. mith and Henry R. Whitehead.

The other suit, which involves 8 res, is filed in behalf of George E. rett and Robert R. Dye.

It is believed the reason for filing e suits in Alexandria instead of rlington County is that Duncan's sidence is in the portion of Alexndria which was included in the nexation of January 1, 1931, but hich, prior to that date, was a part Arlington County. Duncan resigned as clerk of the Arlington court a ort time ago.

More than 100 car repairers emoyed at the Fruit Growers Express Alexandria have been furloughed, d officials at the plant state they e unable to say when the men ould be taken back. Lack of spring usiness due to the continued cool eather is said to be partially responble for the cut, which is the largest ade at the plant this year.

The lay-off is said to have been enrely unexpected.

The Women's Organization for Naional Prohibition Reform has called mass meeting of the women of lexandria for tonight in the Virnia Public Service Auditorium. The eakers will include Miss Julia Sully, airman of the Richmond branch the organization; former Repreentative E. J. Jones, of Pennsylvania, th "drys" all their lives, according announcements.

The Alexandria branch of the organization was formed about a month and now boasts a membership 200.

Prince Georges County Disease Rate Is Lower

Prince Georges County was "remarkably free from communicable diseases" during April, "aside from a flare-up of seventeen mild cases of scarlet fever," according to the report of the county health officer, which was issued yesterday.

Two cases of diphtheria developed and it was impossible to isolate them, but other members of the family were given antitoxin and did not develop the disease. There were a few cases of whooping cough and one case of measles. The report points out that children suffering from these ailments often develop complications which cause death, but that temporary immunity can be given to those who have been exposed. There was only one case of typhoid fever during the month.

MONTGOMERY FIELD DAY IS SET SATURDAY

9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Plans have been completed for the annual athletic meet of the public school children of Montgomery County at Rockville Fair Grounds Saturday, Superintendent of Schools Edwin W Broome announced yesterday. The children will participate in badge tests for bronze, silver and gold medals, competitive track and field events and group games. The schools have been divided into five groups, so that each child will compete only in his own class group.

A special train will be run by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad between Takoma Park and Rockville. The train will leave Takoma Park at 8:40 and arrive in Rocville at 9 a. m., stopping at Silver Spring, Forest Glen, Kensington and Garrett Park.

A radical departure is announced this year in the sale of food and novelties at the field day. Instead of leasing the concessions, the lunch will be served by a committee of mothers under the supervision of the board of education so that the children will be provided with properly prepared lunches at a reasonable cost.

The public health nurses and the county health officer will conduct a first aid booth.

Dr. William Burdick of the Playground Athletic League, with a corps of 50 experts, will conduct the meet, aided by a group of prominent county residents.

Suit for damages of $5,000, alleging personal injuries, was filed by Emma S. McGarey yesterday against Jesse A. Lay, of Bethesda, Md., in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville. J., the car, through his negligence, ran off the road, crashed through a fence and down an embankment.

The plaintiff, through Attorneys Robert B. Peter, jr., and Sefton Darr, alleges that she received painful and permanent injuries.

A clinic for diseases of the chest will be held in the new county health office at Rockville Courthouse May 13, at 10 a. m., for white persons, and at 1 p. m., for colored, Dr. V. L. FAIRFAX BOARD POST IS GIVEN MRS. FINKS

Is First Woman Named for Service on School Body; Two Boys Arrested.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Fairfax 166.

Mrs. Mildred L. Finks, of Wellington Villa, is the first woman appointed to the Fairfax County, Va., school board. The appointment, effective July 1, was made yesterday by the board, which is composed of Asa Bradshaw, of Herndon, chairman; Ronald Blake, of Oakton, secretary, and Mrs. Blanche Davis, of Lorton. Mrs. Finks will serve as member from Mount Vernon magisterial district, succeeding John T. Haislip, of Gunston Hall.

The other change was the naming of George C. White, of Burke, to succeed Dr. F. N. Brooks, of Fairfax Station, as board member from Lee district. Dr. Brooks has been a member and chairman of the county board since its organization on September 6, 1922. Prior to that time, under the district school boards, he was a member of the Lee district school trustees. Dr. Brooks is also chairman of the Fairfax County Republican committee.

The other members of the board who were reappointed were John T. DeBell, of Centerville district; Joseph Murphy, of Dranesville district; Herbert T. Williams, of Providence district, and Vernon M. Lynch, of Falls Church district. The new school board will meet for the first time on July 5 and elect new officers. The other members of the board are Frederick W. Robinson, of Herndon, and Samuel H. Styles, of the town of Falls Church. These members from incorporated towns are selected by the town school boards.

Fairfax County Manager F. Norvell Larkin was ordered to cease all county highway work on June 30 in compliance with the provisions of the new Virginia road law by the county board of supervisors yesterday.

In answer to a query from the Herndon Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Larkin stated the program of road improvements of the county highway department as contemplated prior to the passage of the new State road law was to reduce the county road levy 10 cents per $100 each year for the next five years. At that time all county roads would be improved and could be maintained from the county's share of the State road tax. This would mean that county road taxes could be eliminated.

The State highway department offered the county $9,343 for that portion of the county highway equipment which it could use. This was apparently about 60 per cent of its actual valuation at this time and was for approximately 40 per cent of the road building equipment now owned by the county.

This offer from the State did not include the county equipment depot, quarry or rock-crushing machinery, steam shovel and other heavy road-building machinery. The supervisors refused to consider disposing of any county-owned equipment until after the vote.

A number of representatives of the banks in the county appeared relative to the resolution passed by the board's last meeting, giving the banks until September to raise the interest rates on sinking funds on deposit with them to 4 per cent instead of 3.

Two 17-year-old youths from Baltimore were arrested in Fairfax County yesterday attempting to take an automobile of Mrs. Mary Cullen, at Fairfax. They gave their names as Jack Magaross, of 1640 North Appleton street, and Milton Blundam, of 2016 Bryant street, Baltimore.

Police state that the youths will not explain their actions or where they were headed for. Last night the police were awaiting the arrival of relatives of the youths from Baltimore before taking further action against the boys.

Arlington G. O. P. to Act On Byrd Road Plan Tonight

County Republican Club to Take Definite Stand at Meeting; Clean-Up Committee Seeks Trash Cans for Business Corners.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Definite action will be taken by the Arlington County Republican Club at its meeting tonight in the Rucker Building at Clarendon on whether or not it favors the county withdrawing from the provisions of the Byrd road act passed by the General Assembly at its recent session.

The law provides for the State taking over all county roads into the State highway system and unless the citizens of the county take advantage of a clause in the bill which permits an election on the question the county remains under the provisions of the bill.

Headed by Stanley H. Williamson, chairman, members of the executive committee of the clean-up campaign of the Arlington County Bicentennial Council will appear before the county board Saturday morning to ask that trash containers be placed on every business corner and in the thickly settled residential communities in the county.

Beginning today report blanks will be distributed to every home in the county. These are to be filled out and returned to the committee at its headquarters in the rooms of the chamber of commerce not later than next Tuesday. Final results and awarding of prizes will await the tabulation of these reports.

Persons having trash to be removed should notify County Engineer C. L. Kinnier or County Manager Roy S. Braden's office at the courthouse.

Saturday will be the last opportunity for persons wishing to participate in the Democratic primary in August and the general election in November to pay their capitation taxes, according to announcements from the office of County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse. The office at the courthouse will be open until 1 o'clock.

The Women's Auxiliary to the Arlington County Master Plumbers Association will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the Moose Hall, Courthouse road and Wilson boulevard, Clarendon. Newly elected officers will be installed.

Election of officers will be the principal business of the Bafcroft School and Civic League tonight. The meeting will be held in the community house at 8 o'clock.

Two others arrested with Mahoney in the second case and indicted with him pleaded not guilty. No date has been set for their trial.

Wife Declares She Became Mother, but Refuses to Let Mate See Children.

West Palm Beach, Fla., May 4 (A. P.).—Whether Mrs. Cecile Porter Rouse became the mother of a baby here April 7 or not was the question before the circuit court today.

Mrs. Rouse asserts she did, according to her husband, Charles P. Rouse, of Washington, D. C., who has been separated from his wife for several months. On receipt of the news that a baby had been born to his wife, he told the court, he came here, but she refused to let him see the infant.

He obtained a writ of habeas corpus to compel his wife to produce the child in court Monday. She appeared, but the child did not.

Judge C. E. Chillingworth continued the hearing until today, but when the case was called neither Mrs. Rouse nor the child appeared.

Rouse's attorney asked the court to award custody of the child to the father or to hold that no such child existed.

The attorneys say that no birth certificate has been found that is considered valid and that they can produce witnesses who saw Mrs. Rouse walking about the streets on the day she claims the child was born.

Two Seized in Plot to Kill Heads of Spanish Regime

Madrid, May 4 (U.P.).—A plot to assassinate President Niceto Alcala Zamora and Premier Manuel Azana, after which a Right Wing (presumably monarchistic) government would take power, was disclosed tonight after the arrest of a lawyer and a retired military officer.

The lawyer, Perez Aragon, and the militarist, Joaquil Oyarzabal, were believed to be mere intermediaries in the plot, which was described as an amazing scheme providing for carefully timed attacks by gunmen. The plotters were said to have attempted to arrange for the assassination of Alcala Zamora during his recent trip to Valencia. Then it was planned to kill the premier when he appeared at the state funeral which would have been held for the president.

With both of the powerful republican government leaders dead, the plotters were prepared to put a new government of Right Wing elements into power, according to one witness.

The arrests of Aragon and Oyarzabal were not believed to be of importance at the time they were seized by police, but the details of the assassination plot were disclosed later, police said.

Oyarzabal was quoted as saying the plotters gave one individual some 6,000 pesetas (about $420) and instructed him to go to Valencia and hire gunmen to assassinate Alcala Zamora. The man accepted the money, but when he returned said he had spent all of it.

Police indicated that a gunman named Lahoz, reported to have been a fireman at the royal palace at one time, had received 80,000 pesetas as pay for himself and his confederates in connection with the plot.

PAN-AMERICA UNION DEFERS CONFERENCE

Meeting in Montevideo Will Be Held in 1933, Instead of This Year.

The seventh Pan-American conference, scheduled to meet at Montevideo, Uruguay, yesterday was postponed from December, 1932, to December, 1933, by the governing board of the Pan-American Union.

The action followed a suggestion made at the meeting held in April that the conference be postponed for a year and the receipt of a communication from the government of Uruguay concurring in the suggestion.

The board adopted a resolution urging the American Institute of International Law and the permanent committees on international law to continue the work of preparation for the conference with a view to having the projects on the various topics of the program available not later than November, 1933. These projects will then be forwarded to the respective governments in order that they may be made the object of detailed study and instructions to the respective delegations.

The regulations of the seventh Pan-American conference were also approved by the governing board yesterday.

On the postponement of the conference, the board adopted an explanatory statement saying:

"The program of the seventh international conference of American States contains many questions, especially under the heading of juridical and economic problems, which will require prolonged preparatory study prior to the assembling of the conference. The Pan-American Union has requested the preparation of technical studies and draft projects by the American Institute of international law, the permanent committee on public international law at Rio de Janeiro, the permanent committee on private international law of Montevideo, and the permanent committee on uniformity of legislation and comparative legislation at Havana.

"It has become apparent to the governing board that even with the exercise of the greatest industry it will not be possible to complete these preparatory studies and projects in time to submit to the governments sufficiently far in advance of the meeting of the conference.

"Under the headings of economic problems and transportation, there are also a number of questions which call for the submission of well-considered projects long in advance of the coming together of the delegations at Montevideo.

"Since the final formulation and adoption of the program by the governing board, considerable work has been done on these questions, but the projects in which will be embodied the results of these studies, have not yet been formulated."

U. S. Again May Weigh Salvador Regime Claims

Possible reconsideration by the Department of State of the claims for recognition by the present government of El Salvador may follow the meeting reported from Monte Carlo yesterday, where Secretary of State Stimson conferred with Dr. J. Gustavo Guerrero, Salvadorean delegate to the World Court.

The United States soon after the coup d'etat of last year refused to recognize the government which succeeded that of former President Araujo. The reasons advanced by the State Department were in conformity with the principles of the treaty of peace and amity between the Central American republics. One of the articles of this treaty provided that any former member of a government driven out of office by revolutionary means, could not become an officer of the new revolutionary-controlled government. Gen. Martinez, present chief executive of Salvador, was formerly vice president and minister of war.

Secretary Stimson has not communicated with the department here the result of his conversation with the Salvadorean jurist. However, it is believed that no decision would be announced by the Secretary until he had opportunity of conferring with other officials of the department here.

The regularly appointed minister, Dr. Carlos Leiva, is now in New York and in his absence the first secretary, Roberto Melendez, is acting as representative of the Martinez regime. Edward E. Gann, Vice President Curtis' brother-in-law, has been retained by the Martinez supporters to press their constitutional claims for recognition here.

8 Passengers Drowned As Motor Ferry Sinks

Trapani, Italy, May 4 (A.P.).—Eight passengers drowned when the motor ferry, San Giuseppe, sank yesterday near here in a sudden squall, it became known today. Four of the crew and eight other passengers were saved.

The ferry, which runs between Trapani and Favignana, overturned and the occupants clung to the wreckage for an hour and a half before they were rescued by fishermen. Among the drowned were two children, whose mother became crazed from grief.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

SINCE it has been suggested that Washington's own star, Helen Hayes, be impressed into service to enact the role of Elizabeth Barrett in the United Artists' film version of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," it is of interest to know the last word of Katharine Cornell on the matter of entering the movies, as recently communicated to this department by that punctilious and pungent publicist, Mr. Ray Henderson, writing from the Harris Theater in Chicago.

Miss Cornell, in discussing her decision not to appear in the screen production of Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," says:

"In the theater I can do the plays I like best to act and which I enjoy doing. I don't say I never shall appear on the screen. It would be absurd for any one to say that. No one knows what the future holds or what developments there may be in the films and in our theater. I have visited studios in Hollywood and have seen pictures being made. I found it all fascinating and I have great admiration for the players and producers who have achieved eminence in this field of art, but I feel whatever talent I may have is for the stage.

"I love the theater too much to leave it. I want to spend my life in it, as long as I am able to walk across the stage. I don't mind the idea of growing old, but I want to be sure I shall grow old in the theater.

"There are a number of plays I want to act and there never has been a greater opportunity for us of the speaking theater than that of the present. The talkies have not hurt the stage. There is plenty of room for the screen and for us. The former can do some things infinitely better than we can, but we can do things the films can not possibly undertake."

Miss Cornell's refusal to act Elizabeth Barrett in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," or in any other drama or story, leaves her one of the very few distinguished players of the stage who have turned a deaf ear to Hollywood.

That testimonial performance to be staged for the reimbursement of the National Theater Players who cut their own salaries to pay musicians' wages and thus forestall the closing of their season at the end of two weeks instead of ten, is really coming off on Sunday night, May 15, as suggested in this column yesterday.

A committee composed of Joseph P. Tumulty, Wilton J. Lambert, John Poole and Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, is in charge of the testimonial, which promises to be one of the most diverting performances ever presented in a Washington Theater.

Ona Munson, musical comedy and film star before joining the Players, will sing some of the song hits from the successes in which she has appeared—"Hold Everything" and "No, No, Nanette" among them—Clifford Brooke, director, will be seen in a London music hall skit, Edward De Sibour Melcher and Mabelle Jennings, from among us of the death watch, have a sketch in rehearsal and altogether, as Bert Lahr would say, there will be "some goings-on, some goings-on."

And as we have already remarked, it ought to be a lot of fun.

Today is the day when all of the youths in and about Washington, and many of the adults, will go about their daily chores with their necks craned toward the heavens. Not a bad idea, once in a while, at that!

At 11:55 a. m. a plane will take off from the Hoover Airport with 300 toy balloons aboard—which ought not to weigh it down too much—to many of which will be attached a guest ticket to "Vanity Fair of Today," opening tomorrow at RKO-Keith's.

Manager Hardie Meakin of the theater and the officials of the Ludington Line would have us believe—as if we hadn't been a press agent ourself once—that there is a scientific motive actuating this stunt. It seems that the theater and the airplane people are virtually all agog over how far a toy balloon will travel before coming to earth when released at a height in excess of 1,000 feet.

Maybe 10,000 miles, for all I know—but who cares?

In case you missed it, the name of the picture is "Vanity Fair of Today"—at RKO-Keith's, beginning tomorrow! After all, hooey or no hooey, that's the main idea.

And it might be well to bear in mind that this is the week when the inaugural of the new bills at RKO-Keith's shifts back from Saturday to Friday, the nonexistent vaudeville bookings no longer rendering the Saturday opening obligatory.

Incidentally, since reverting to an exclusively screen program, RKO-Keith's has reduced its night admission price from a top of 60 cents to 50 cents. The morning and afternoon prices remain the same.

When the Washington String Quartet presents its first public concert at the Hotel Shoreham tomorrow night, a European style of presentation will be inaugurated. It is the custom abroad, and one little observed in this country, for an audience of string quartet programs to be seated entirely surrounding the players, who occupy a small platform in the center of the room—giving an effect not unlike a prize ring.

The program is to begin at 9 o'clock. It is sponsored by Hans Kindler as a benefit for the National Symphony Orchestra.

Day after tomorrow is the day of days in the anticipation of a majority of the Capital's youngsters, as well as no few of its oldsters. Glen Echo Park opens on Saturday, May 7—that is, all but the Crystal Swimming Pool, which will not be available for use until Saturday, May 28.

Of course, Glen Echo means thrills and thrills; in this instance meaning the Roller Coaster, the Whip, the Airplane Swings, the new "Dodgem Rides," the Midway and all of the other familiar joy-makers of past seasons, plus a few that will be new this year.

And there is plenty of parking space!

"Cinderella," in ballet form, followed by a series of divertissements and solo dance numbers, will be presented by the junior group of the Lisa Gardiner Dancers at the Arts Club Auditorium, Saturday afternoon of this week, at 4:30.

The senior dance group, with Miss Gardiner appearing in person, will present a program of dances on Saturday evening, May 14, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Wardman Park Theater.

Not since The Lambs, marching behind a band led by the late Victor Herbert, paraded up the Avenue preliminary to presenting their famous "Gambol" in the Capital, will the theatergoers of Washington have seen such an absolute novelty in the theater as the Friars' Frolic, which comes to the Washington Auditorium on Thursday, May 19, for one performance only.

The glorified group composing this gigantic hippodrome is sponsored by the Friars' Club of New York, an organization of wits and mimes, of whom the Abbott is George M. Cohan. Although Mr. Cohan will not be one of the galaxy, the cast of 50 performers, nevertheless, will represent the cream of Broadway's acting, musical and circuit talent.

Or so Harold Phillips tells me.

For the week beginning next Monday evening, the National Theater Players will present A. A. Milne's charming play of "Michael and Mary." This play, first produced in London and later a triumphant success on the New York boards, has been rated by critics on both sides of the Atlantic as a real classic.

The story is a simple one, concerning two young people who fall in love almost at first sight in the British Museum, where each is awaiting a sweetheart who never puts in an appearance. It is fantasy from beginning to end, this play, and one that might have been written by the man who gave the world "Peter Pan"—Sir James M. Barrie.

There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The new bookings in the temples of the tintypes that titillate and talk will be as follows: Fox—Thomas Meighan and Charlotte Greenwood in "Cheaters at Play" and Fanchon & Marco's "Coeds" Idea; Earle, Ruth Chatterton in "The Rich Are Always With Us," and Mercedes headlining the vaudeville; Palace, Jack Oakie, Virginia Bruce and Richard Arlen in "Sky Bride," and "Slim" Timblin in Loew's "Frivolities" revue; RKO-Keith's, Conway Tearle and Myrna Loy in "Vanity Fair of Today;" Metropolitan, Joan Blondell in "The Famous Ferguson Case;" Rialto, Luis Trenker, Tala Birell and Victor Varconi in "The Doomed Battalion," second week; Columbia, Walter Huston, Anita Page and Phillips Holmes in "Night Court," second week.

If you are still listening—and I won't hold it against you if you are not—today's participants in the second annual music week festival at the Fox Theater will be the Langley Junior High School Orchestra, conducted by Vladimir Vasa, at 12:46; the Marjorie Webster School Glee Club at 3:30; the Kaspar Junior Violin Ensemble, Josef Kaspar, conductor, at 6:24, and the American University Orchestra, under Dr. J. H. Leineweber, at 8:59.

Announcement of the decisions of the judges, Miss Jessie MacBride, Leon Brusiloff and Phil Lampkin, together with presentation of cups to the winners, will be made at the theater during the early part of next week.

Isn't it warm in here all of a sudden! Or is it the heat?

POLICE BAN OPENING OF MERRY-GO-ROUND

Walker Denies He Prompted Move Because Play Is Aimed at Politicians.

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—The melodramatic satire on political corruption, "Merry-Go-Round," cast its producers into a drama of real life today as they fought in vain for permission to open the doors before which a corps of police stood as sentinels.

A charge that the public would interpret the closing tonight as "a new form of political censorship just because this show deals with political intrigue," brought only a mild reaction from James F. Geraghty, commissioner of licenses, as he listened to arguments of the producers' attorneys.

"Is that a threat aimed at me?" the commissioner asked, and received the brief assurance, "Oh, no."

Meanwhile, Mayor Walker scoffed at reports he had acted to have the show stopped because it "poked fun" at high political figures in New York, although the locale of the play ostensibly is a nameless city.

He had taken no action in the matter, the mayor said, and knew nothing about it until he read of the closing this morning. He thought "the whole thing is a publicity stunt."

Commissioner Geraghty in turn assured the producers at the hearing at which he refused to allow the show to open under a temporary permit, "if what you want is publicity, you have had it, but there will be no license until my demands are met."

Those demands include an application for a permit made in writing—the producers themselves said they made an oral application yesterday—and a thorough inspection by the fire, police and building departments and the department of water supply, gas and electricity. The Avon Theater, he said, had been closed for six months and therefore the examination would have to be extra thorough.

Claudette Colbert And Foster Part

But He Scoffs at Divorce Idea After She Moves to Hilltop Home.

Hollywood, May 4 (A.P.).—"Separation," an event which in the lives of other married couples of the screen means news and possibly scandal, had come again today to Claudette Colbert and Norman Foster. Miss Colbert moved yesterday from Foster's hillside home into a hilltop home of her own, and life goes placidly on for both of them.

Foster and Miss Colbert have been taking separate homes, off and on, since they were married five years ago, when both were on the stage.

Foster laughed about reports of an impending divorce. "We have always lived this way," he said. "We see each other every day, but we are both too independent to live happily for long in the same house. As it is, we love each other and besides stay better friends than if we lived together all the time."

Value of Erlanger's Estate Put at $124

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—The estate of Abraham Lincoln Erlanger, theatrical producer, which was generally believed to be worth millions, actually amounted to $124.20, aside from debts "uncollected or uncollectable."

An ad interim accounting of the estate of the producer, who died in March, 1930, was filed in surrogate's court today. The money owed Erlanger at the time of his death and which Saul J. Baron, temporary administrator of the estate, termed uncollected or uncollectable, amounted to $1,270,252.

Soviet Oil Output Grows.

Moscow, May 4 (A.P.).—Oil production in Soviet Russia for the first quarter of 1932 amounted to 35,469,833 barrels (42 gallons to the barrel), representing an increase of 10.6 per cent over that for the same period last year.

LYNCH, G. U. FRESHMAN, WINS ARMY-NAVY MEDAL

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

EARLY May is a hazardous period to be speculating on the outcome of pennant races, but the American League campaign is beginning to look very serious as far as the Washington and Philadelphia clubs are concerned. At this writing, the Nats are in first place, seven full games ahead of the Athletics, no mean margin.

Seven full games are a lot of games for any club to whittle away in any man's league and if Connie Mack has not yet begun to worry concerning this little deficiency he is a man of sublime faith. But they pay off on wins, not faith, and Mr. Mack might well conjure with the situation which, from a Philadelphia standpoint, is becoming no better rapidly.

The Nats may need their seven-game margin sorely when midsummer rolls around, but the fact remains that they now have it in their possession for future reference and can count upon their margin to stand them in good stead in the event of a slump. A seven-game margin when and if a slump strikes, is infinitely better than no margin at all, or perhaps a deficiency.

Even if this department appears to be counting the Athletics out this season, which it has no intention of doing, there are the New York Yankees to be reckoned with and reckoned with in perhaps a greater degree than the 1931 champions.

But the Nationals are also operating from a vantage point of three full games where the Yankees are concerned, and three full games are vastly better than none at all. Before the Yankees succeed in overhauling the Washington Club there are these three games to be disposed of and sometimes three full games are three too many to overcome.

This department is noting nothing new when it points out that the first three weeks of the season finds the Nationals very comfortable indeed and fortified quite grandly with their respectable leads over both of their chief rivals. And as far as the strain of setting the pace goes, Johnson is as willing to bear it as Joe McCarthy and Connie Mack are to relieve him of this awful tension.

The teams following the pace are said to be in the strategic position for a final successful drive, but there is no record as yet of any league-leading manager voluntary relinquishing first place.

The Athletics have recovered from five straight defeats to win two successive games from the Boston Red Sox, but the feeling is still extant that Connie Mack's mighty men of 1929-30-31 are disintegrating on his hands.

Six times in eight games have the Athletics bowed to the superior hitting and pitching of the Nats. Mack's two victories this week in Boston were both achieved by the might of his two star twirlers, Grove and Earnshaw. Lefty Grove, who lost only four games last season, has already suffered three reverses. Earnshaw has been batted out three times in the first three weeks. It was said long ago, that if either Grove or Earnshaw failed Mack, the Athletics could not hope to maintain their winning pace.

Last year Grove and Earnshaw contributed 70 games to the Athletics' winning total, a sensational performance for two pitchers. It was hardly likely that they would repeat, but others of Mr. Mack's cast seems to have taken this year to fail him also.

The Athletics as champions last season were at best a five-man team comprising superstars in Grove, Earnshaw, Simmons, Cochrane and Foxx. But for a championship team, Mack's infield was far below championship caliber.

Joe Boley, who wasn't good enough to play shortstop last year, is being given the preference over Dib Williams, and with Boley a year older and calculated to go back rather than improve. At first base, Jimmy Foxx was ever a slovenly fielder, and Oscar Roettger, the recruit from the International League, has been unable to oust him.

Jimmy Dykes long ago passed his peak as a third baseman, and his hitting this season has been extremely puerile. The slipping Bing Miller is alternating with Roger Cramer in right field, another admitted weakness in a championship team.

Which means that Mack's five superstars must maintain their terrific pace if the lack of balance is to be offset. If any one, or two, weaken under the pace, the A's can hardly hope to repeat.

Gevinson Game But Outclassed in Preliminary Bout.

Lone District Amateur to See Action in A. A. U. Battles.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, May 4 (A.P.).—Louie Gevinson, the lone member of the Washington, D. C., delegation called into action by the draw for the opening night of the national A. A. U. championships, ran into the crack southpaw from Cleveland, Sam Julian, and was eliminated.

Gevinson boxed smartly enough, but was no match for Julian, a deadly left-hand puncher. Julian kept after the Washington youngster every inch of the way, rapping both hands to the head and body as he drove forward, and he all but sank Gevinson in the third round.

A volley of lefts to the head rocked Louie and had him in distress. He managed to box his way clear, however, and held the fort till the bell rang without landing in the resin dust.

Flynn Floors His Foe.

Flynn, possessed of one of the anakiest left hands in the entire fistic world, turned loose his flashiest left hooks in the second round to knock Nathan Crystal, of St. Louis, down twice for nine counts. He coasted so obviously, however, in the first round, and had such a narrow edge in the brisk battling of the third, that the opening crowd of 10,000 booed the decision in his favor.

Favorites marched easily through the early bouts on the program that carded 31 battles for the opening night of a three-day tourney in which the top four of the 146 starters automatically qualify for the Olympic tryouts.

Jack Holland, of New Orleans, burly end for three years at Tulane, hammered out an easy decision over Stanley Snider, of Aberdeen, Md., in the first of the heavyweight encounters that set the big crowd to roaring in cadence as Holland, in close, belted as many as fifteen rights in a row to Snider's body. There were no knockdowns.

Eight bouts in the welterweight division failed to disclose any outstanding competition for Flynn, although Ruben White, of Honolulu, displayed a nice right cross in whipping Jim Nedomansky, of Baltimore.

White Lone Survivor From Hawaii.

White was the only one of two Army entries from Hawaii to survive the first round, the second, Charles Fair, losing to Merle Cherry, of Laurel, N. B., in the same division. Hugo Crowder, a clever New Yorker, offered promise of some opposition for Flynn in outpointing Ralph Sikes, of San Antonio.

The night was almost devoid of real punching, only two knockouts arising from the first 21 bouts.

Shea, 15, Shoots 69 In Congressional Event

The golf season opened at Congressional Country Club yesterday when William Shea, 15-year-old linksboy, won the right to have his name inscribed on the Walter Johnson Trophy with a 69 low net score, aided by a 33 handicap. Paul Shore took second place with 70, helped by a 29 handicap.

Melvin Dennett and Luther Steward tied with 79 for low gross.

Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes' 188 low gross was good enough to win the women's event. Low net went to Mrs. Joseph Dowdall, with an 83. M. Parker Nolan averaged 238 2-3 yards on three drives to win the tee contest. Ed Morse was second, with 223 2-3. Mrs. Haynes copped the pitch and putt.

More than 130 golfers participated.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 4 (A.P.).—Thomas M. Cassidy's Universe, winner of the Wood Memorial Stakes at Jamaica Saturday, was slightly lame tonight, but a veterinarian said there was a "good possibility" he would be able to start in the 1932 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs Saturday.

Dr. N. E. Southard, the veterinarian, said Universe wrenched a joint in his left front foot during a workout today. Dr. Southard said the horse was able to stand on the foot three hours later, and probably would fully recover in time to start in the $50,000 added stake.

Universe, by virtue of his victory in the Wood Memorial, in which C. V. Whitney's Top Flight ran fourth and was withdrawn from the Derby, was a highly regarded Eastern threat for the Derby, second only to the Loma Stable's Tick On in the backing of Eastern turf enthusiasts.

With Universe out, the historic race would appear to be strictly between Tick On and Col. E. R. Bradley's entry of Burgoo King and Brother Joe, with Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Stepenfetchit and Overtime among the contenders.

Six Derby eligibles were beaten in races at the Downs today. The best performance was recorded by Thistle Ace, George Collins' eligible, which ran third in a mile race won by Prince Athebling. Snow King and Rowdy Boy, other Derby eligibles in the race, were among the also rans.

Three filly eligibles for the Derby were among the also rans in a 7-furlong race won by Boiling Water. The eligibles beaten were Depression, I Say and Oscillation.

Tick On was worked the full Derby distance of a mile and a quarter today in 2:07, driving. Col. Bradley's Burgoo King ran the distance in 2:08 handily, and his stable mate, Brother Joe, worked it in 2:09, driving.

Other horses working the full route were Universe, 2:13 2-5, breezing throughout, and R. M. Eastman's Cathop, 2:09 4-5, driving. Mrs. Whitney's pair, Stepenfetchit and Overtime, worked a mile and an eighth in 1:55, Stepenfetchit handily and Overtime driving. J. H. Louchheim's Economic also worked a mile and an eighth in 1:59, breezing.

TRIBE BEATS BROWNS, 8 TO 3

Errors Prevent Shut-Out in 10th Win of 11 Games.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 4 (A.P.).—Robbed of a shutout victory by Johnny Burnett's two successive fumbles at second base, big Clint Brown nevertheless held St. Louis to six hits while the Indians were pounding out fifteen bingles for an 8-to-3 win today.

The game closed the Indians' Western stand and they go to Philadelphia tomorrow to open against the Athletics with a record of ten victories in their last eleven games. The Indians had a field day against Sam Gray and Wally Hebert.

Montague collected a perfect score at bat, getting two hits and a walk, starting a squeeze play and sending three runs across. Willie Kamm hit for three out of five and scored four times, while Myatt continued his hitting streak by getting three out of four and scoring twice.

Save for the third inning when Burnett's two errors on easy grounders allowed St. Louis its three runs, the Browns were in a position to score again only once.

That, too, was in the third inning when Brown purposely passed Goslin to fill the bases with two out. Rick Ferrell grounded out to Brown to retire the side and pull the big Indian right-hander out of a ticklish situation.

Pirate Errors Aid Cubs to 4-to-1 Win

Warneke and French in Hot Box Duel; Hack Steals Home.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 4 (A.P.).—With flashy support, Lonnie Warnecke held the Pittsburgh Pirates to six scattered hits today, enabling the Chicago Cubs to win, 4 to 1.

Warnecke and Larry French put on a warm mound battle, but the Pittsburgh defense faltered several times and the Cubs were quick to take advantage of the misplays.

Hack's steal of home in the third inning was the bright spot of the game. The victory gave the Cubs two out of three.

NAVY RALLY BEATS G. U. IN NINTH

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 4.—The Navy baseball team wriggled out of its slump to win an uphill game from Georgetown here today by a score of 6 to 5. The Tars played inside baseball to put the game away, pulling the squeeze play on three occasions, and scoring their runs in groups of three, the first batch coming in the seventh inning, and the others by a rally in the ninth.

With Carpenter twirling an effective game for six frames and his teammates bunching five hits to score three runs in the fourth session and another in the fifth, the Hilltoppers looked as though they would be returned sure winners. But, when the Middies started their smart play in the seventh, it crossed up the inner works of the Blue and Gray and paved the way for eventual disaster for the visitors.

For three innings the opposing hurlers staged a pretty duel. Georgetown, however, found "Slim" Davenport in the fourth. McNamara, visiting shortstop, started his team in the run-getting by clouting to center field for the circuit.

Four Singles Help Navy In Rally.

Singles by O'Rourke, Rapp, Hutchinson and Carolan were responsible for the other two runs in that stanza. The Hilltoppers get one across in the fifth when Kilgallon drew a pass, stole second, went to third on a balk, and scored on McNamara's clean single. A fine running catch by Bunce of Evers' line drive in the sixth prevented two other Georgetown scores.

Navy found hope in the seventh when Kane walked, Cronin singled to left, and Bunce got a pep single, sending both Kane and Cronin home. McNamara threw wild to third, enabling Bunce to pull up at that sack, and the latter scored when Davenport worked the squeeze play being thrown out at first on a bunt.

The Sailors pulled the game out of the fire in the ninth when Cronin was safe on McNamara's miscue and scored on Bunce's triple to right. Davenport again came along with the squeeze play to score Bunce and he too was safe at first. Masterton singled, sending Davenport to third and McEachern squeezed him home. Weather was ideal for baseball, and that, coupled with the fact that Georgetown always is a big drawing card here, was responsible for the largest crowd to assemble in the stands of Lawrence Field this season.

Idle Nats Face Invasion by White Sox

Fonseca's Revamped Club Opens 3-Game Series Tomorrow.

Johnson Dissatisfied With Batting Punch Despite Success.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WASHINGTON fans, who yesterday had to confine their baseball interest to the doings of the other American League teams, will be up against the same thing this afternoon when another off-date date is drawn on the schedule. It will be different tomorrow, though, for the Chicago White Sox arrive for the first game of thirteen to be played against Western clubs.

So many changes have been made by the Chisox that they will hardly be recognized, except because of their heavy-looking blue uniforms. Only three of their last-year regulars are on the job—Lu Blue at first., Manager Lou Fonseca in the garden and Bob (Fat) Fothergill in another. Otherwise, newcomers are showing their stuff.

Appling has been playing second of late, but he is expected to give way to Hodapp, obtained from the Indians. Seeds, who figured in the same deal, is filling one outfield berth, with Kress, late of the Browns, at short, and Selph, a rookie, at third.

Jones and Hayes Here With Chisox.

Two former Nationals make their appearance with the Westerners, Pitcher "Sad" Sam Jones, who likely will be seen in a game here, and Jack (Sonny Boy) Hayes. The latter failed to earn himself a regular job, although given plenty of opportunity to do so, and has been relegated to bench duty.

With the two days respite given them by the schedule, the Nationals will have practically all of their pitchers ready. Despite the fact that the team is leading the league, it has not shown the punch expected and has gotten by because of good pitching and timely hits, rather than any great number of bingles, except in a few games.

Manager Walter Johnson had his athletes on the job bright and early yesterday morning trying to tune up his players' batting eyes and another session has been called for this morning. While he is more than satisfied with the results accomplished, he contends that his Nats have a much stronger general attack than they have shown and he will not be satisfied until he gets more hitting out of them.

When it is considered that the Nationals have won six successive games—three each against the Mackmen and Yankees—and that, in turning in these victories, Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw, Rube Walberg, Charley Ruffing, Vernon Gomez and Herb Pennock were beaten, this demand for more power may sound a little foolish.

Manush, Judge, Myer, Bluege Below Stick Par.

But Skipper Johnson is absolutely correct in his contention. Although leading the league, except for Carl Reynolds, not a National is among the batting leaders and only Reynolds, Cronin and West boast an average as high as .300. Manush, Judge and Myer, always counted upon to hit as high, if not higher, than this figure, boast respective marks of .327, .292 and .260, while Bluege's .214 rating is about 80 points lower than his normal gait. And Johnson will not be satisfied until these lads deliver at their usual average speed.

So far, the Nationals have been successful because they have gotten better pitching than the preseason dope indicated was in store for them, have benefited from their share of the good breaks and have seen their hitters, inconsistent as they have been as a whole, pick each other up by taking turns in having good days.

Johnson does not want to fill the role of a "Job's comforter," but he has been in the game too long not to know that one of these days his fast-traveling mound staff is likely to crumble temporarily and that, if the Nats are to finish what they have started in the pennant race, his batters will have to have enough power to overcome any weakness which may develop in the box.

Catcher Roy Spencer reports himself ready to play. His ailing leg appears to be normal again, following a few days' rest. He probably will get the call from now on, but his lay-off did one good thing for the Washington cause—it showed Pilot Johnson that Moe Berg is a good substitute and that except, possibly, in hitting, he does not weaken the team any when he is in the line-up.

Betts and Worthington Star as Braves Win

Philadelphia, May 4 (A.P.).—Huck Betts won his third straight victory for the Boston Braves when he shut out the Phils today, 3 to 0, allowing only four hits. Red Worthington, the Braves' left fielder, drove in all Boston's runs. The game was called at the end of the eighth inning to allow Boston to catch a Western train.

Reynolds Great Factor In Nats' Position at Top

A REFRESHING item of these depressionistic times with gilt-edge securities what they are, is the handsome dividends being paid the Washington ball club on last winter's trade with the Chicago White Sox.

The deal that brought Carl Reynolds to the Nats has given, and is still giving, indications of transforming the Washington team from a mere first division club to a downright serious pennant contender which is now operating from the vantage point of a three-game lead over the New York Yankees and a seven-game advantage over the Athletics, the two most feared rivals.

For, be it known, Mr. Reynolds is slamming pitched balls to all sectors of the diamond for an imposing average of .397, which ranks him second among the league's hitters and earns him the honors as the most valuable batting member of the Washington team.

Had .359 Average Two Years Ago.

Ordinarily it might be hasty to brand Reynolds as a batting demon in his first year with the Nats, but the outfielder who was the former sock of the White Sox, is a hitter of established reputation, having batted .359 in 1930 to stand third behind Simmons and Ruth as the league's leading sluggers that year.

Reynolds is the hard-hitting, right-handed outfielder that President Clark Griffith of the Nats has been seeking for the past four years, a search that was virtually an obsession with him until he finally landed Reynolds in exchange for Sam Jones, Irving Hadley and Jackie Hayes. Johnny Kerr, who came along with Reynolds in the deal, has been no drawback on the few occasions he has broken into the infield.

The quality of Reynolds' hits as well as the quantity have already won this new member of the Nats a host of admirers. Strictly an arm and shoulder batter, with a seeming stiffness in his swing, Reynolds hits the ball on a line, but extra bases are his for the taking whenever drives are not directly at the outfielders.

In doping out horse races, it is a trade expression of the so-called experts to "forget that last race" and that is exactly what the Nat owner did when he grabbed Reynolds, despite the fact that the later batted only .290 last year.

"A fellow who can hit .323, .317 and .359 in successive years as Reynolds has," said Griffith, "can be rated as a good hitter and I figure that we can forget about his lapse last season and figure on him hitting high, wide and handsome this year."

Cards Beat Reds, 7-0, To Gain Fourth Place

St. Louis, May 4 (A.P.).—The world champion St. Louis Cardinals climbed back into the first division of the National League today when Flint Rhem shut out Cincinnati, 7 to 0, and forced the Reds into second division.

It was Rhem's third pitching victory this season and came on the heels of Dean's shut-out of the Reds yesterday.

Catcher Gus Mancuso made a hit in each of four times at bat today and knocked a home run his first time up. Blades also slammed out a home run, with one on, in the fifth inning, during which the Cards scored five times.

Capital Fans Planning For "Sam Rice Day"

A "Sam Rice Day" in honor of the Nats' veteran outfielder was proposed yesterday by members of the Optimist Club and plans were outlined for the dedication of a date in July when the Washington Club plays at home, as a tribute.

Friends and admirers of Rice, who is now in his eighteenth season with the Nats, were urged to attend a meeting to be held at the Hamilton Hotel on Friday, at which time a committee will be named.

It was suggested yesterday by Washington Williams, of the Optimist Club, that either July 20 or 21, when the Nats play the Tigers here, be designated as "Sam Rice Day."

DANCING MACK, ODDS-ON, TRIUMPHS IN PIMLICO FEATURE

Choice Wins By a Head In Drive

Vaccillate Wins Over Voltagreen in Romp in Fifth Race.

By WALTER HAIGHT
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 4.—Dancing Mack, 4-year-old gelding with the cake-eater name, proved the best of the field of seven which sought The Neighbors Purse, the day's feature, here today. Johnny Gilbert had the mount on the winner and had to ride out to the limit to stall off Bokie B. Lillybet was a driving third.

Dancing Mack did not get the best of the break, which found Lillybet off first, but Gilbert hustled his charge to the front and pulled over to the rail at the clubhouse turn. The ultimate winner saved every inch of ground possible for the entire trip.

Tulach Arc Threatens But Falters.

At the far turn, Tulach Arc moved up and for a sixteenth threatened to take the lead. However, the filly dropped back again at the swing into the stretch and Lillybet and Bokie B. went after Dancing Mack. Bokie B had the most left and was wearing down the winner at the finish.

A warm spring day brought out more than 10,000 fans although the card was hardly up to the standard of most racing days here.

Stroll Along, the promising son of Strolling Player and Noise, won the first race, fashioned for yearlings. Vendace was second and Jesting third. Stroll Along broke on top today and it is probably good that he did. Few 2-year-olds this season have finished any faster than did Vendace from a slow start. Hanford was gaining ground in big hunks at the finish. Jesting got up in time for the show award. The time of 0:54 4-5 for the 4½ furlongs was exceptional.

St. Francis Responds When Called On.

St. Francis fenced well and moved up to take command when called upon. Shylock was second and Cahriveen third. The latter set the pace for seven-eighths of the 2 miles, but was unable to withstand the late speed of the other pair. The chase brought several falls but no injuries to horses or riders.

Jimmy Smith, on Ballygran, and Sonny Workman, on Star Porter, thought they were staging a dual race for the purse in the third race, but they failed to take into consideration one Miss Purray, with an apprentice boy, J. Petz, in the saddle. The latter combination began a rush at the stretch turn which won the race going away. Ballygran was second and Star Porter third.

Gilbert made it two in a row, bringing Vacillate home an easy winner at the 6-furlong sprint distance. Voltagreen was second and Hagerstown third. Vacillate gained the lead going up the back stretch and had no trouble drawing away at the end.

Eager Play Takes Sixth With Rush.

Eager Play won the sixth, with Tazewell second and Faylin third. Make Haste and Faylin set most of the pace, with the former dropping out of it rounding the stretch turn. Eager Play came up to pass the tiring Faylin, and Tazewell rushed the last sixteenth to gain the second money.

The seventh went to Fleet Flag. John P was second, ahead of Jolly Pilot.

Hamilton to Coach Alexandria Ball Team

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., May 4.—Joe Hamilton, St. Mary's Celtic star outfielder, has been appointed as coach of the Colonial A. C.

Curly Dolph, ace of the Colonials, will be lost to the team for several weeks. Dolph severely injured his arm in Sunday's game. He has been the mainstay of the club for two seasons.

On Sunday the Colonials will oppose the Lincoln A. C. at Guckert's Stadium.

On Friday, Alexandria High School baseball players will make their second bid for a clean slate in the Third District competition, opposing Fredericksburg High nine at Baggett's Stadium.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STROLL ALONG, $7.50, $4.30, $3.50; VENDACE, $5.30, $4.80; JESTING, $13.30.

STROLL ALONG, away well and showing good speed to take command, opened up a winning lead when straightened into the home stretch, but had to hustle approaching the finish to withstand VENDACE. Latter, a forward factor from the start, closed resolutely in the final drive. JESTING closed on the outside, held the others safe. PERFORMANCE was unable to reach a forward position and could not threaten the leaders. BLACK SAMBO was outrun. OLD FIELD was shuffled back after the first sixteenth mile. BRIGHT PATTERN was never a factor. HALF SAINT lacked speed. CARTE BLANCHE had early foot.

ST. FRANCIS, restrained for the first turn of the field, worked his way to the leaders rapidly while fencing stoutly, wore CAHIRCEVEEN down coming to the final fence and drew out on the flat when nearing the finish. SHYLOCK, far back for the first mile, improved his position steadily and came courageously for the closing test. CAHIRCEVEEN went into the early lead, was reserved until challenged and then tired fast in the final half mile. HAMPTONIAN was away poorly when he half wheeled at the start. He was gaining slowly at the finish. SWEESIE raced forwardly for a mile and weakened thereafter. RIENZI was never a factor. HIGHLAND CAPTAIN lost his rider at the final fence. DOCK LIGHT lost rider at the twelfth fence. PROOF POSITIVE ran out at the tenth fence, was taken back and finished the course. DAMRINDA refused at the ninth. PURPLE DUST lost rider at the seventh fence and WONDERFUL lost rider at the third fence.

MISS PURRAY, outrun for the first half mile, swung to the outside when moving to the leaders at the final furlong pole and, closing stoutly, was drawing clear under urging. BALLYGRAN raced STAR PORTER and WEDDING RING into defeat, but could not stall off the winner. STAR PORTER, a stout factor and normally handy, held on well in the final drive. MARVAN, slow at the going, worked his way between his field in the final stages and finished full of run. PAINT BOX could not menace the leaders. WEDDING RING tired fast in the final drive. BERTRANO raced well. PROJECTILE saved ground the entire trip. He was being eased when unable to reach contention.

FOURTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,300; claiming. The Neighbors. For 3-year-olds and upward foaled in Maryland. Start fair from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. DANCING MACK, outrun his field to the first turn, was steadied in front while saving ground, shook off stout contention from TULACH ARD, but had to be vigorously ridden to stall off BOKIE B. Latter, rated off the pace, moved up steadily in the final half mile, slipped through on the inside of TULACH ARD and LILLYBET during the stretch turn and opened some daylight when straightened in front. TULACH ARD, dropped back leaving the back stretch, was placed to punishment, and outstayed TULACH ARD in the final test. TULACH ARD made a strong effort midway of the far turn, and held on well in the final issue. FAIR AVIS was outrun.

VOLTAGREEN, slower than usual away from the barrier, reached the leaders at the turn and continued with good courage for the final drive. HAGERSTOWN, a stout factor in the first five furlongs, tired in the closing drive. MYNHEER was outrun when failing to extend himself. BLUE DAMSEL was never a factor. FOROITE had no mishaps. INDICATIVE quit badly.

EAGER PLAY, allowed to settle in his best stride, worked his way to the leaders gradually, swung to the outside when moving into the lead and came away steadily. TAZEWELL, outrun for six furlongs, improved his position on the outside and closed gamely. FAYLIN raced MAKE HASTE into defeat, but could not keep pace when challenged in the final quarter mile. JODHPUR raced forwardly and had no excuses.

DEAR AL: PIMLICO RACE TRACK.

Danny McAuliffe's injuries were greatly exaggerated, it seems. The veteran rider not only left the hospital yesterday, but will ride Sunvir and Crumplay today. Investigated that sudden drop in the price on Inception. Somebody tossed a wad of cash in the paddock window at closing time and the runner was late in reporting to the main mutuel plant. Eddie Smith, Washington, won with Eager Play

CATHOLIC U. WINS TRACK MEET

Cards Defeat Gallaudet, 85 to 41

Capt. Rayhill Leads Individuals With 17 Points.

McGuigan Shatters Track Record at 440 Yards.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S track team ran off its annual meet against Jim Rayhill, of Gallaudet, yesterday afternoon and won by the handsome margin of 85 to 41. Rayhill, captain and spark plug of the losing side, was high point scorer with 17 markers.

The versatile Blue won firsts in the 220 and pole vault and seconds in the 100, the high jump and third in the broad jump. He was seconded by Vincent Fraatz, Catholic's great timber topper, who took firsts in both hurdles and the high jump.

Gale McGuigan, one of the fine distance runners under the eye of Coach Dorsey Griffith, broke the track record for the 440 when he ground out the yardage in 49 4-5 seconds. The old mark, of his own making, was 51 1-5.

Bingo Flynn heaved a discus 122 feet 9½ inches and Pete Lauer "umphed" a gilded shot away from him for 43 feet 7 inches for additional stadium marks.

One of the better endeavors of the day was the 10 1-10 seconds mark of Lyons, of C. U., in the century.

Midget and Junior Nines Make Plans for Season

Three Additional Teams Admitted to Capital City League Play; Seniors Will Hold Meeting Tomorrow Night.

FINAL preparations for the opening of the junior and midget divisions of the Capital City League, sponsored by The Post, were made at a joint meeting held last night in the office of the Playground Department at the District Building.

The signed contracts of all players, accompanied by their birth certificates, must be returned to the secretary of the league not later than midnight Monday. At that time franchise fees also must be posted. The midget teams approved a franchise fee of $18 and the juniors one of $21. Two additional clubs were granted franchises in the midget division—Wonder Bread and the Iowa A. C. The Dixie Polish Co. nine was also awarded a berth in the junior circuit.

The announcement of the withdrawal of the Saks Clothiers from the unlimited division brought two applicants for the vacated franchise. Both teams will be received into the loop. They are the Aztecs, former champions, and Department of Labor. The Aztecs have lined up several members of the Saks team to aid in the race. The Labor team was organized only recently and little is known of its strength.

Tomorrow night the teams entered in the senior division will hold their last meeting before the start of the season. All teams are urged to have a representative present, as important business will be transacted.

CHEVY CHASE TO STAGE DOUBLES

Veteran Stars Compete Here Friday and Saturday.

THE annual tennis tournament which the welter of District fans generally read about after it is over—the yearly Chevy Chase Club invitation doubles—will open today on the club's courts and be continued tomorrow and Saturday during both morning and afternoon.

R. Norris Williams, champion of the United States in 1914 and 1916, is among the expected entrants. He will pair with Watson Washburn, with whom he played constantly some years back. Harry Brunie, one of the best indoor court players in America, but almost unknown otherwise, is another entrant, as is Cedric Major, District champion in 1925.

Local players will be seen in the doubles tournament only in the event of defaults among the invited players, most of whom are a bit past their prime but still capable racquet wielders. Gilbert Hunt, local boys' champion, is among the eligibles on the reserve list.

Boys in Ring Battles At Noel House Tonight

Leading boy boxers from the Boys Club, Noel House, Knights of Columbus, Merrick A. C. and the National Training School will throw gloves tonight at the Noel House in that club's final ring presentation of the year.

MARYLAND U. FROSH ROUT EASTERN

MARYLAND'S freshman baseball team walloped Eastern High, defending District of Columbia public high school champions, 9 to 2, yesterday at College Park. It was the third win over a Washington public high school nine for the Old Line youngsters and their fifth win in six starts.

Bob Love, Maryland pitcher, backed by errorless fielding, marked up his third win in as many games. He held Eastern to six hits and fanned thirteen, eight in a row. Dick Lanahan, who started on the mound for Eastern, showed creditably, but was the victim of poor support and gave way in the fifth to Cleary, who was ineffective, but stuck through the seventh. Hale finished the eighth inning for Eastern.

TILDEN HERE IN TENNIS FEATURE

TENNIS' best offering, a match in which Bill Tilden will do battle with Karel Kozeluh, will be laid before District net fans Sunday afternoon at Wardman Park Hotel, along with another singles match in which Hans Nusslein, 22-year-old professional champion of Europe, will meet the man who taught him to play, Roman Najuch.

It will be Washington's first glimpse of Nusslein, who injected new life into the pro game last fall when he emerged from nowhere to press Tilden to the limit. Indeed on an occasion or two Nusslein has taken the old master into camp.

Tilden's latest downfall, however, came last Saturday night at the hands of Kozeluh, who took him 7—5, 6—1 at Cincinnati. It was Kozeluh's first American appearance of the season and he appeared to be in better form than ever. His machine-like backcourt, play proved an insurmountable barrier even to the rifling shots which only Bill Tilden can impart.

Title Claimant In Mat Feature

Henri De Glane, the only man who ever won a title by having a piece of his arm bitten off, makes his bow to followers of the gentle recreation of rassling next Tuesday night at Bolling Field's first outdoor show of the year. De Glane, who earned his claim to "world's champion" when Strangler Lewis bit him a year ago, will meet Lee Wycoff.

Also on the first outdoor bill will be Joe Malcewicz, who should be able to claim some titles himself, having held De Glane to a two-hour draw last week. Malcewicz will meet Jack Patterson.

The wooden stadium Bolling will erect will seat in the neighborhood of 3,000. In the event of rain the show will be moved indoors, in the gymnasium where the Bowser boys now operate.

It will be De Glane's first appearance in this neighborhood. After he "defeated" Lewis he defended his title by beating Gus Sonnenberg in Boston.

Maryland U. Nine Meets Duke Today

The choicest collegiate morsel for baseball fans of this vicinity will be served this afternoon on the diamond at College Park, where Maryland and Duke Universities clash beginning at 3:30 o'clock. Both teams are rated among the best in the Southern Conference.

Two other Capital collegiate teams are slated for action today, George Washington's tennis team entertaining the Duke racqueters at Columbia Country Club, and Maryland's netmen visiting Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.

336 COMPETE SATURDAY IN MEET

39 Schools Entered in Annual Md. Field Day.

COLLEGE PARK, Md., seat of the University of Maryland, will be a hotbed of athletic endeavor Saturday afternoon when 39 high school track teams, made up of 336 boys, run, jump and heave for top honors in the interscholastic field day annually sponsored by the university.

Eastern, defending champions; Central, generally looked upon as the successors to the title; Tech, a notable dark horse; Western and Georgetown Prep have entered teams, totaling 81 boys. Central, with 25, leads the bunch in number of teammates. Western has 6 listed.

Besides the track meet there will be a lacrosse game between Maryland and St. John's, which should go a long ways in deciding which of the two teams deserve Olympic consideration. Maryland's track team and Johns Hopkins will stage a dual meet also.

In the interscholastic end of the program, the local schools, who have enjoyed something of a monopoly on honors, will find serious competition in Gilman, Baltimore Poly and Plainfield (N. J.) High Schools. Central, with perhaps the best team in a decade, is favored, nevertheless, to take top honors. Eastern will have the use of Bob Slye, virtually its whole team, although Slye is no longer eligible for strictly high school competition.

The list of schools entered follows:

Aberdeen, Allegany, Annapolis, Baltimore Poly, Bel Air, Boonsboro, Brunswick, Catonsville, Centerville, Charlotte Hall, Easton, Emmittsburg, Frederick, Georgetown Prep, Gilman, Greensboro, Hagerstown, Hyattsville, Laurel, Libertytown, Lonaconing, Middletown, Maryland Park, New Windsor, Reistertown, Smithsburg, Sparrows Point, St. James, Street, Towson, Upper Marlboro and Westernport, all of Maryland; Tech, Central, Eastern and Western, of Washington; Wilchester of Woodstock, of Virginia, and Plainfield, N. J.

54 Entries Received For D. C. Marathon

Fifty-four entries have been received for the 15-mile open D. C. marathon championship race to be run Sunday under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. The race has been sanctioned by the A. A. U. Bill Agee, veteran Baltimore runner, heads the list of entries. Officials are anticipating a field of 75. The race will be from Mount Vernon to the K. of C. Hall, over the new Mount Vernon boulevard.

MOPEY DICK AND THE DUKE.

"What do you mean our overcoats ain't worth pawning—you been lending us money on them for the last six years, ain't you?"

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

(Mrs. Alice Liddell Hargreaves, the original Alice of the Lewis Carroll whimsies, is now visiting the United States.—Editor's note.)

ALICE IN AMERICA.

"WHAT are all those tall things?" asked Alice, landing in America.

"Those are skyscrapers," said the Mad Hatter. "The country is full of them.

"What good are they?" asked Alice.

"They grow over night, don't they, if the weather is good?" asked Alice.

"Not any more," said the Mad Hatter.

"If you placed those two tall ones horizontally," said the Cheshire Cat, "they would cover more ground than the longest golf course.

"Oh, let's place them that way!" exclaimed Alice. "I've got all afternoon.

"It wouldn't do," said the Mad Hatter. "All the tenants would be working upside down, or nearly so."

"Mightn't it be just the change they need to make them happy?" asked Alice.

"The elevators would all run crosswise, instead of up and down," put in the Cheshire Cat.

"What of it?" demanded Alice.

"It wouldn't make sense," said the Cat.

"That's the trouble with the world," complained Alice. "Everybody wants things to make sense. There's much more fun without it. Are all those tall buildings occupied?"

"Some of them are almost empty," said the Mad Hatter.

"Does that make sense?" asked Alice.

• • • •

"LET'S talk of something else," urged the Walrus. "How would you like to see the greatest collection of rabbits in the universe?"

"Oh, goody, goody!" exclaimed Alice. "Where are they?"

"In the subways," said the Walrus.

"What's the subway?" asked Alice.

"It's a long hole through the rocks and mud where people go to see if they can still take it. I understand that if all the discomfort experienced in the subway could be placed end to end it would make an ache twice as long as a world cruise."

"What's that peculiar odor?" asked Alice, sniffing at a kiosk. "Are we near a cabbage farm?"

"That's the subway," said the Carpenter. "We're standing right over it."

"I say it's cabbage and the hell with it," hummed Alice a little annoyed.

• • • •

"YOU might have some manners!" cried the Carpenter, as several wall-eyed pedestrians bumped into the group, bowling Alice over.

"My! My!" said Alice, getting up and brushing her clothes. "Why is everybody in America in such a hurry? Just look at them rushing madly hither and thither. They must be attending to very important business."

"That's the laugh," said the Walrus. "There is no business."

"Then why do they rush about so furiously?" asked Alice.

"It feels so good when they stop," said the Walrus.

"Make mine vanilla," sighed Alice, hopelessly, as she stepped back just in time to avoid being hit by a careening taxicab, driven by a man going no place in particular, with all day to do it in.

The Pulitzer award for the best play of the year goes to "Of Thee I Sing." We understand the judges were in debate for three nights arguing whether to give it to that entertainment or to Ringling Brothers' Circus.

House and Senate Agree On Jobs for All Ensigns

(Associated Press.)

The House and Senate are agreed that no midshipmen who graduate at Annapolis shall be forced to go without jobs in the Navy.

Amendments to a bill to permit the commissioning of all this year's graduating class were accepted yesterday by the House. The Senate already had approved the changes, so the bill now goes to the President.

SECOND WAGE SLASH EXPECTED IN STEEL

Executives Survey Proposal as Operating Deficit Sets Record Mark.

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—A second downward readjustment of wages by the United States Steel Corporation is being widely discussed in the steel trade as an early probability.

While officials of the corporation have declined to comment publicly upon the matter, sources usually well informed say the matter has been thoroughly surveyed by U. S. Steel executives in recent weeks.

Omission of the common dividend a week ago, coincident with report of first quarter operations showing the largest operating deficit in the company's history, has been regarded in the trade as paving the way for a further wage readjustment. It is pointed out that a belated spring revival of activity in the industry might have stalled off such action, but that no revival of consequence has occurred. The first quarter resulted in a loss of $13,280,000 before payment of preferred dividends.

In 1931, U. S. Steel had an average working force of 203,674, of whom only 53,619 were on full time. The company's pay roll amounted to $266,871,000 for the year against $391,271,000 in 1930. The sharp contraction in the pay roll was in keeping with the reduction of steel mill activity. Against an average operation at 65.6 per cent of capacity in 1930, the Steel Corporation operated at 38 per cent of capacity in 1931. So far this year the rate has been considerably below 30 per cent.

A 10 per cent reduction in wages was put into force by the corporation last October 1. Advocates of further retrenchment point to recent steel business records as distinct evidence that another wage cut is probable.

On March 31, last, the corporation reported its smallest backlog of unfilled orders on record. The total was 2,472,413 tons, a decline of 73,216 tons from the February 29 total. It marked the twelfth consecutive monthly decrease in unfilled orders and indicated that while the company had gradually reduced its operations, the decline in incoming business had been even sharper.

Vulcan Detinning Co.'s first quarter net of $30,089 was equal to 4 cents a common share. In the initial 1931 quarter the company had profit of $79,264, or $1.38 a share on the common.

Two Boston Banks Joined by Merger

First National Absorbs Atlantic as Solvent, Going Institution.

Boston, May 4 (A.P.).—The First National Bank of Boston, one of the seven largest banks in the United States, has taken over the assets and deposit liabilities of the Atlantic National Bank, one of Boston's largest banking institutions.

Under an arrangement completed last night both banks today operated as one. The First National has guaranteed to pay in full all depositors of the Atlantic in both commercial and savings departments.

The First National's cash is approximately twice the deposit liabilities of the Atlantic and its resources more than triple those of the smaller bank.

In a statement issued last night by the First National its cash was listed at $122,000,000 and total deposits of the Atlantic National were listed at $65,000,000. In addition to its cash on hand the First National Bank also has between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000 in Government bonds.

Officials of both institutions said that acquisition of the Atlantic was made with that bank in a strictly solvent condition.

In explaining the situation, officials of the First National said it was not a question of a larger bank absorbing a smaller one to dominate the field, but rather in line with the general banking movement throughout the country, where the assets of smaller banks are being protected by stronger ones. The action, they said, was taken at the request of both the Atlantic National and the Boston Clearing House Banks.

Markets and Business in Review and Outlook

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

The Path to Glory.

EVERY disaster has its ridiculous face in retrospect. And since it is the spirit of the day to put the best possible interpretation on every new display of congressional chaos, it is only fair to admit that the $42,000,000 economy bill passed by the House of Representatives on Tuesday probably represented a genuine effort on the part of the Democratic leadership to trim $200,000,000 from the Federal budget. It is distressing, of course, to some 50,000,000 or 60,000,000 people throughout the United States who are suffering the tortures of uncertainty in their business plans that the honorable members did not really sink their teeth into the economy business, but it would be unfortunate if the Nation should fall into the easy error that this great body of economic hill-billies did not do their very best under the Democratic and LaGuardia circumstances.

The bill shows on its face, not that the honorable House is unwilling to economize, but only that the whole matter is away over is dull collective head. Our congressmen want to do right by the country. No one should doubt that for a minute. And there should be ample reassurance for all in the knowledge that if the House knew precisely what to do it would be quick to act in the national interest.

Barking dogs seldom bite a kind and charitable hand, so there can be no harm in patting the House gently on the head for another six weeks. If the country will but remain patient, the end will come. As of today, it is questionable whether the end of the session will come before the end of everything else. But in any event, nothing is to be gained by harsh judgments on the House. If we make the leaders angry with us they may suddenly go flooey and do all sorts of wild and irresponsible things—just to get even with the United States.

* * * *

CONGRESS acknowledged the wisdom of economy and governmental reorganization when the House established a special select committee to inquire into ways and means of affecting the reform and the Senate, almost simultaneously, delayed all appropriation bills pending further mandatory cuts under the drastic budget estimates. Together, these two actions constituted an impressive testimony to the soundness of President Hoover's demands for a prompt and thoroughgoing realignment of Federal functions.

Thus, the problem of achieving some genuine progress in this field reduces to a question as to who shall reap the political glory for whatever may be accomplished in the present session. With an eye on the coming presidential campaign, the Democratic leadership in the House is unwilling to permit any action which might reflect credit upon the President. Nothing else can explain the long era of complete inactivity in the face of the voluble economy affirmations of Messrs. Garner, McDuffie, Cochran and Byrns.

* * * *

THE wise suggestion has been made that the President's most promising recommendations be incorporated in a measure to be styled the Garner-McDuffie-Byrns-Cochran-LaGuardia bill for Reorganization and Economy. Then let this bill be passed promptly by both houses.

This, in the scroll of history, will place all credit where credit is due; and the method offers the additional advantage that it may preserve in the history texts names which might otherwise pass soon to the limbo of practicing politicians.

President Hoover already has signified his willingness to forego all credit for leadership in this most urgent reform and has twice, in communications to Congress, emphasized his interest in results rather than method. Moreover, in the case of the Glass-Steagall bill he permitted his entire program to be wrapped up legislatively in Democratic names. There could be no better testimony to his interest in the substance rather than the form of essential legislation.

The Garner-McDuffie-Byrns-Cochran-LaGuardia bill, effecting a reform sorely needed in the United States for more than a quarter century, would offer credit and glory for all—for all, at least, whose principal interest in retrenchment is political credit and glory. If the only way to obtain economy is to pay for it in political glory to those who are holding up the public welfare for politics' sake, let the price be paid to the kidnapers. Anything to recover the lost child of prosperity.

We feel confident that, if necessary, the country at large would be willing to deal with the House leaders through a Jafsie. The code could be arranged quickly. This would protect the honorable leaders against the public disgrace of acting openly with wisdom and dispatch on a pressing problem of state.

BANKS CITED MATCH KING, SWEDEN SAYS

Kreuger Summoned to Meet Financial Investigators; His Suicide Followed.

Stockholm, May 4 (A.P.).—Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, had been summoned from the United States to appear before representatives of the National Bank of Sweden and other banks in Berlin on March 15, when he committed suicide in Paris on March 12, the banking committee of the Riksdad reported today.

The report, which was approved by a majority of the committee, censured the management of the National Bank, the Riksbank, for what it said were enormous credits granted Kreuger.

Six business associates of Kreuger who have been arrested in connection with the investigation into his world-wide affairs will be given their first hearings next Friday on charges of assisting him in financial irregularities.

Police investigators have been working day and night for nearly a month to assemble evidence against the men.

Newspapers said today a number of further arrests in connection with the Kreuger difficulties were expected soon as a result of a thorough examination of all the telegrams sent from Stockholm during the past year by Kreuger and his companies.

The aim of the police, the newspaper accounts said, was to obtain a complete list of Kreuger's secret agents and to do this they are gradually probing their way into the wide range of his various transactions.

It was disclosed today that Foreign Minister Hellner, who was sent to Rome to clear up the Italian end of the Kreuger tangle, had been informed by Premier Mussolini that Kreuger had forged the name of the Italian Finance Minister Mosconi to an Italian match monopoly which never was granted.

Hellner told Mussolini that from the documents in hand it seemed clear there had been negotiations between Kreuger and the Italian government which resulted in his acquisition of the Italian match monopoly in return for a state loan. The premier told him that those negotiations never were concluded and that there had been no agreement.

$70,000,000 in Match Permits Called Myth

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—Testimony was given in bankruptcy proceedings today, that although Ivar Kreuger represented that nearly $70,000,000 had been invested in match concessions, apparently these concessions were never realized.

James N. Rosenberg, counsel for the Irving Trust Co., receivers for the bankrupt International Match Corporation, testified about the allegedly mythical concessions in a hearing before a Federal referee in bankruptcy.

He said that in a confidential report Kreuger asserted the vast sum of money had been spent for concessions in countries he designed only as X, Y and Z.

"I have found nothing to show that the entries mean anything more than X, Y and Z," he said. "I am not aware that there is anything real behind the figures. I know of no asset representing this investment of nearly $70,000,000."

Speyer & Co., and J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation, fiscal agents, announce that the May 15 coupons of Kingdom of Bulgaria 7½ per cent 40-year secured sinking fund gold bonds will be paid when due.

Market Comment

Following are excerpts from yesterday's leased wire market comment. These tabloid surveys will appear daily on the market pages of The Washington Post.

G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.—Foreign exchanges moved against us, indicating that foreign markets are again taking alarm over developments in Washington.

Discussion was general as to the reasons why banks are not increasing loans and investments in accordance with Federal Reserve policy and movements in deposits. The most widely held opinion is that they are unwilling to make important commitments of any kind while uncertainties over tax and banking legislation exist, and feel it would be unwise to be more lenient regarding collateral loans until it is known whether taxes on securities transactions will be large enough to mean drastic curtailment of markets. In that respect, weakening of the opinion that Congress will adjourn early in June is discouraging, for if Congress is to reconvene after the conventions, political uncertainty will last many weeks.

The relatively more businesslike attitude and actions of the Senate reduces the amount of despair existing in financial sentiment somewhat. * * * It is to be hoped that when the economy and Goldsborough measures reach the Senate the same speed and sanity of response will be met.

Westheimer & Co.—The undertone at the close indicates that the rallying tendency may carry through for another day or so. Basically, however, the situation continues to call for a high degree of caution in investment activities. Doubt exists as to whether liquidation has been completed, particularly on the part of insurance companies. The general business situation as yet shows no important change and concern is felt over the failure of Congress to enact genuine economies and to adopt more constructive financial policies.

(United Press)—Pressure on the stock market lifted near the close yesterday after market averages had been carried to new lows since 1904 in the early trading.

The recovery was the most impressive seen in weeks and served to hearten traders who were dumping their securities overboard. In the absence of any important outside news developments, market observers attributed the turnabout to operations of an unwieldy short interest where the position was becoming too crowded for comfort.

Selling of the Government bonds as well as scattered liquidation in stocks was attributed to the street's dislike of the proposed Goldsborough credit expansion bill, which many feared would lead to uncontrolled inflation and heavy loss of gold to foreign countries.

Stocks Stage Recovery; Bonds Again Sink Lower

Short Repurchasing Aids Shares to First Advance in Week; Rails Lead Bonds in Slump to Bottom, Losing 1 to 6 Points.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

New York, May 4 (A.P.).—The stock market today demonstrated that it could, upon occasion, rally.

Thanks to a late recovery, apparently based in the main on short repurchases, prices closed higher for the first time in a week, although advances averaged into only a fractional gain.

The market looked despondent through the morning and early forenoon as further liquidation, on a somewhat broader scale, pulled leaders down 1 to 3 points to the accompaniment of sharp losses in United States Government securities, domestic corporation bonds and a still heavy dollar. But many losses among shares were converted into gains which, even though short covering seemed primarily responsible, at least provided a respite from the enervating sag of recent sessions.

Selling Volume Increases.

Selling was in slightly larger volume during the decline. Roughly, it embraced all groups except oils and gold mining issues, the latter showing considerable spirit on the advance.

When the rise came it quickly caught up many stocks whose weakness had created considerable technical strength and in a few instances net gains amounted to two or three points or more. Among these were Union Pacific, International Business Machines, Lehman Corporation, Auburn and Drug.

Shorts in International Shoe, which had been loaning at a high premium, were squeezed. Their predicament, in fact, seemed to have something to do with the general decision to cover.

Net advances ranging from a fraction to a point were made by U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, North American, Western Union, Sears-Roebuck, National Biscuit, Woolworth and Peoples Gas. Homestake Mine was up half a dozen points and Alaska Juneau more than one.

Pan American Petroleum B, notwithstanding reports that its merger with New Jersey Standard was nearing final stages, softened several points, but other petroleum issues cheered by evidence of statistical improvement by the industry.

Bonds Sink Lower.

The bond market descended to new depths in the somewhat turbulent sea of lowering prices today and only a modicum of support for hard-pressed issues was forthcoming.

The United States Government list, which for weeks has been running counter to the declining trend, relaxed and five of the recently popular Treasuries recorded losses of more than a point. The Liberties did slightly better, but none of them was able to hold and advance.

The general weakness of listed securities was attributed partly to uncertainties connected with economy measures, being considered at Washington, to the fear in some quarters of ultimate inflation, and in the threat of increased gold shipments following the strength of foreign exchanges.

The rails were the hardest hit of the corporate groups. Losses of from 1 to 6 or more points, especially among the low-priced carriers, were common. Conspicuous losers included some bonds of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Central Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, Chesapeake & Ohio, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, New York Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Pennsylvania, St. Louis Southwestern, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific. Firmness was shown by the Missouri Pacifics, Canadian Nationals, Burlingtons, Illinois Centrals and Wabash.

Utilities Follow Rails.

The utilities were not far behind the rails, but the industrials displayed fair resisting powers. Communications company loans were under pressure, some of the Western Unions again reaching new lows for 1932. American and International Telephones also gave ground.

A few of the oils improved, including Skelly, Humble and Shell Union.

Both Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s lost from 2 to 2½ points.

Armour & Co. liens sagged as did National Dairy Products 5½s.

The erratic Argentines were off from 1 to 4 points on few sales. The Australians advanced, as did the Japanese, French and British. Polish bonds weakened and the Germans were soft. Austrian 7s of 1943 dropped 4½ points, while the 7s of 1957 gained 1¼.

Trading was more active than in several weeks, sales totaling $13,844,000 par value.

Curb Pressure Lifts.

Selling continued to predominate in curb market transactions today, which totaled 190,000 shares, or 70,000 more than yesterday, but pressure lifted toward the close. Final price changes were mixed with most leading stocks off from fractions to a point or more.

Common stocks of public utility companies held well, a number reporting fractional gains for the day. Electric Bond & Share advanced ¾ to 12½. Commonwealth Edison common was the star performer in this group, moving up 3⅞, to 70⅞.

A contrary drift appeared in the preferred stocks. Losses of 1 to 3 points appeared in American Superpower second preferred, Electric Bond & Share $6 preferred, Empire Gas, Georgia Power, New England Power, United Light & Power and United Gas preferred issues.

A mixed tone developed in the oils, Gulf advancing ⅜ to 29 and the Standard Oils of Indiana and Kentucky both advancing fractionally, while Standard of Nebraska yielded 1¼ points to 14 on announcement of the dividend reduction to 25 cents a share for the quarter, against 50 cents last quarter. Standard of Ohio, which was a strong feature yesterday, yielded 1½. Cities Service touched a new low, but recovered.

EXPORT SALES AID GRAIN PRICE RISES

Wheat and Corn Benefit by Overseas Purchases; Crop Reports Mixed.

Chicago, May 4 (A.P.).—Export purchasing of 1,500,000 bushels of North American wheat, not counting cargoes taken for Russia, helped put new backbone into grain values today.

Additional to wheat-export business were earmarks that some corn had been bought for overseas, and also that rye and oats were finding an outlet to Europe. Temporarily, corn dipped to below the season's bottom price record, as well as cutting under quotations at Buenos Aires.

Wheat closed firm, ½ to ⅞ above yesterday's finish, corn unchanged to ⅜ higher, oats unchanged to ⅜ up.

Estimates of the amount of North American wheat bought for Russia indicated that 1,000,000 bushels were taken from the Pacific Coast and 500,000 from the Atlantic. Some advices said this wheat would be mostly used in western Siberia, where Russia's needs were urgent owing to concentration of troops there. It was pointed out that a similar development as to Russia reentering the world wheat export market took place last spring, but this season the matter appears more acute owing to famine in the Volga basin, normally the Soviet's bread basket.

Acting at times, however, as a notable offset to revival of speculative buying of wheat as a result of enlarged export business was unsettlement of securities. At one stage, wheat futures dropped to almost 10 cents a bushel under the market's recent high point. The widest difference for some time existed between Chicago and Liverpool quotations. Domestic crop reports were of a mixed character, but gave some stimulus to bullish traders, especially advices from the Northwest that spring wheat seeding was still incomplete in many sections.

Corn responded to an active shipping demand, with charters for 550,000 bushels to Eastern lake ports. On the other hand, an authoritative unofficial estimate put farm stocks of corn at 740,000,000 bushels, compared with 446,000,000 a year ago and a five-year average of 595,000,000.

OFFICERS RECHOSEN BY BUILDING GROUP

Permanent Association Rises in Assets to $7,000,000; History Reviewed.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Stockholders of the Washington Permanent Building Association held their annual meeting yesterday and reelected all of the following officers and directors: E. J. Sacks, president; John Henderson, vice president; C. J. Bergmann, treasurer; Herman H. Bergmann, secretary; John Waldman, C. Rammling, John H. Clipper, James R. Ellis, C. Chester Caywood, Max Walten, Joseph N. Saunders, Clyde H. Miller, directors.

The association is nearly 51 years old and its assets have risen from $38,824.95, the first year of its existence, to more than $7,000,000.

Loans made since organization total more than $28,000,000; stock paid in, more than $20,000,000, and dividends and interest paid, more than $5,000,00.

First to Adopt Plan.

The association was the first to inaugurate the permanent plan of operation in the District of Columbia. At the time of its organization, the serial plan was followed by local building associations. The permanent plan meant continuation of business from year to year instead of a series of periodic settlements, as the serial associations then operated. The permanent plan was introduced here from Philadelphia.

After preliminary conferences at Gustave Hartig's hardware store at Seventh and K streets northwest and at Diemer's Saengerbund Hall, the association organized May 14, 1881, at German Hall, on Eleventh street, between F and G streets northwest. Its first officers were Charles Herman, president; George Walker, vice president; Gustave Hartig, treasurer; Leonard Eckert, secretary; Henry H. Bergmann, assistant secretary. The association's first office was above the former German-American National Bank at Seventh and F streets northwest, where the Hecht Co. store now stands.

Of its organizers, Mr. Sacks, its president, is still active in its affairs. Mr. Clipper has served it 34 years as a director and auditor and Mr. Bergmann, present treasurer, was for 27 years its assistant secretary. Mr. Henderson's service with the association as director and appraiser covers 26 years. Mr. Rammling and Mr. Waldman have been on its directorate 21 and 16 years, respectively.

Savoy-Plaza Bonds.

The United States Realty & Improvement Co. announces that they will purchase a limited amount of the ten-year 5½ per cent sinking fund debentures of the Savoy-Plaza Corporation, maturing February 1, 1938, at par and accrued interest to June 1, 1932, of which $1,000 of the amount is to be paid by a 6 per cent debenture note of the United States Realty & Improvement Co., dated May 2, 1932, and accrued interest amounting to $18.33 in cash.

These notes will mature on February 1, 1938, interest to be paid from June 1, 1932, semiannually on the first days of February and August. The notes provide that on default of 30 days in the payment of interest the principal will become due at the option of the holder and also contains a provision for prior payment on any interest date at the option of the maker. Debentures of the Savoy-Plaza Corporation should be presented at room 1115, 111 Broadway, New York, on and after May 6, 1932.

Distinguished Group to Take Part in Festival Service on Mt. St. Alban.

MR. AND MRS. HOOVER TO ATTEND PROCESSION

Right Rev. James E. Freeman Will Preach; Communion Is Arranged.

All is in readiness on Mount Saint Alban for the great festival service at 10 o'clock this morning, which will open the great choir and sanctuary of Washington Cathedral for public worship and prayer. From the White House will come President and Mrs. Hoover to attend.

Others in the distinguished congregation will be the widows of two former Chief Executives. Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, whose husband is buried in Washington Cathedral; Vice President Curtis and his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court, Congress and the Diplomatic Corps, and hundreds of Cathedral friends from all parts of the country.

The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and at the celebration of the Holy Communion the celebrant will be the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, Dean of Washington. The Rev. Dr. W. L. DeVries will be the gospeller and the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter, chancellor of the Cathedral, will be the epistoler.

Impressive Procession.

Clergy and laity will be in the impressive procession with which the service is to begin, including 10 bishops and upward of 150 clergymen of the Episcopal Church, a score of clergy of other religious denominations, presidents of universities in the District and Maryland, the architects of the Cathedral, Messrs. Frohman, Robb and Little and lay members of the Cathedral's chapter and council. Among the Bishops will be the Right Rev. H. L. Burleson, assistant to the Most Rev. James DeWolf Perry, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, whom he will represent; the Right Rev. Almon Abbott, Bishop of Lexington; the Right Rev. T. C. Darst, Bishop of East Carolina; the Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, retired Bishop of Pennsylvania and now warden of the College of Preachers; the Right Rev. Philip Cook, Bishop of Delaware; the Right Rev. Walter Mitchell, Bishop of Arizona, and the Right Rev. William Lawrence, retired Bishop of Massachusetts.

Wearing academic gowns, the lay members of the procession will include Philip H. Frohman, E. Donald Robb and Harry B. Little, the Cathedral architects; the members of the Cathedral chapter including Undersecretary of State William R. Castle, former Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton and former Senator George Wharton Pepper, Dr. William C. River and R. V. Fleming, of Washington, and among the members of the Cathedral Council will be Dean Warren P. Laird of the University of Pennsylvania Fine Arts School, Senator David Reed and G. C. R. Ogilby and A. B. Trowbridge.

Work of Bishop Freeman.

Today's forward step in cathedral building marks the splendid progress made in the Cathedral enterprise since the Right Rev. James E. Freeman was consecrated as third Bishop of Washington less than ten years ago.

Today's morning service will be broadcast through a Nation-wide network.

The order of service for the 10 a. m. service includes most inspiring hymns and prayers. The processional hymns will be "Jerusalem the Golden" and "For Thee, O Dear, Dear Country, Mine Eyes Their Vigil Keep;" the offertory anthem will be Gounod's composition, "Unfold, Ye Portals Everlasting," and the recessional hymn which will be sung in commemoration of President Washington, the late Bishops Satterlee and Harding and all the departed founders and benefactors of the Cathedral will be "For All the Saints, Who From Their Labors Rest."

The 4 p. m. service will have as processional hymns, "I Heard a Sound of Voices" and "Crown Him With Many Crowns;" as the offertory anthem, "Now Breaks the Perfect Day Divinely Bright" and for the recessional, "Ye Watchers and Ye Holy Ones."

The officiating clergymen at the afternoon service will be the Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of the Cathedral; the Rev. Raymond L. Wolven, chaplain to the Bishop of Washington, and the Rev. John W. Gummere, canon of the Cathedral, and the sermon will be delivered by the Right Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of New York and honorary canon of Washington Cathedral.

Patriotic Observance.

Before the morning service of the choir opening, a patriotic observance for the National Society of Colonial Dames will be held at 9 a. m. in the Crypt Chapel of the Resurrection, at which Bishop Cook, of Delaware, will be the preacher.

Many of those prominent in official life who will attend the morning service are active on the cathedral's national committees. Mrs. Hoover is honorary chairman of the national women's committee, which is building the north porch in memory of George Washington as a tribute from American womanhood. She will receive late in the afternoon at the White House a group of members of that committee, headed by its national chairman, Mrs. William Adams Brown, of New York.

The annual meeting of the National Cathedral Association, which is composed of approximately 15,000 persons, representing every State of the Union and a number of foreign countries, who annually make offerings for the building and maintenance of the cathedral, will be held at 2 p. m. at Whitby Hall. The second notable service of the day in the choir and sanctuary will take place at 4 p. m. for the members of the National Cathedral Association and the public, at which the Right Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of New York and honorary canon of Washington Cathedral, will be the preacher.

POLICEMAN ATTACK TRIAL UNDER WAY

Kendrick and Yudelevit Are Accused of Trying to Kill Bacon, First Precinct.

The trials of John Kendrick and Harry Yudelevit, charged in an indictment with assault with intent to kill and assault with a dangerous weapon upon Policeman Thomas D. Bacon, of the First Precinct, last February, got off to a contentious start yesterday in the court of Justice F. D. Letts, in the District Supreme Court.

The morning session waxed warm and furious when, at the insistence of Harry T. Whelan, attorney for Kendrick, Justice Letts withdrew a juror and ordered a mistrial because of a remark made to the jury in his opening address by Assistant United States Attorney Julian Richards.

Defense attorneys showed a change of heart soon thereafter and "waived" their right to a mistrial and the case went on when Justice Letts rescinded his order.

However, shortly afterward, Whelan again precipitated a lengthy debate when he filed a motion to suppress as evidence a sawed-off pump shotgun which was seized in an automobile which, Policeman Bacon said, was occupied by Kendrick and Yudelevit. Three hours were consumed in arguing the motion and when court adjourned, Justice Letts announced that he would rule on the question today.

The indictment charges that Kendrick and Yudelevit shot Bacon twice, once in the toe and once in the hip. A host of attorneys represent the accused men. The lawyers are S. McComas Hawken, James A. O'Shea, Myron Ehrlich, Mr. Whelan and Harold Hawken.

Mrs. Ida Gates, 65 years old, of Waldorf, Md., was removed to Sibley Hospital last night after she was seriously hurt in an automobile accident near White Plains, Md. She suffered lacerations and possible internal injuries.

The accident was investigated by State Policeman J. C. Gates. Mrs. Gates was in the car of Colon I. Davis, of Waldorf, whose wife was slightly hurt in the crash.

President S. Percy Thompson presided and introduced the speaker of the day. George O'Connor introduced Col. Bliss.

"Say! There's two men in police uniforms trying to break into the bank down here at 1121 Water street southwest," an excited citizen informed the desk clerk at the Fourth Precinct station last night.

A radio scout car, a precinct detective and the policeman on the beat were sent scurrying to the Water street branch of the National Bank of Washington. They saw two figures in blue uniforms tampering at the door.

The police seized them before they had a chance to move. Explanations were in order and quickly made.

J. W. Cecil and W. Arnold were really doing their best to break into the bank. They are employes of a burglar alarm service. The lock on the bank's front door had been changed yesterday and new keys were sent to them for emergency use. The keys did not fit very well and their struggles to get the door open caused the complications.

ALLEY EXCAVATION CAUSES COURT STEP

Bride Is Told to Proceed in Prosecution of Gerwirz on Nuisance Charge.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride was instructed yesterday by the District Commissioners to prosecute Morris Gerwirz, of 1522 K street northwest, on a nuisance charge in connection with excavation which undermined a public alley just off Ordway street and in the rear of a stone quarry at Connecticut avenue and Ordway street. Previously he had been given five days' notice to remedy the reputedly dangerous condition.

An investigation was started by the corporation counsel's office and the engineer department after a resident had complained that access to his five garages on the alley had been blocked by the closing of the alley upon police order when it became unsafe.

The inquiry revealed, among other things, that a blast order had been issued to Harry C. Crandall, local theater man, who proposed to build a motion picture house on the site, though he was neither owner, agent, nor trustee of the property. So far no construction work has been started for the theater, though the blasting was done.

"It can reasonably be concluded that this blasting work was really in connection with a quarry enterprize, as rock dislodged had been commercially used and stone breaking is still in progress on this site, and not in connection with a legitimate building purpose," Corporation Counsel Bride stated in his report to the Commissioners.

It was at first suggested that the highway department repair the alley and that the owner of the property be assessed for the amount, but this plan was discarded when it was disclosed that the highway department did not have the necessary $20,000 or $30,000 estimated as the cost of the repairs.

Tindall's Death Mourned By Oldest Inhabitants

A resolution of sorrow at the death of William Tindall, oldest employe of the District, who died recently in Walter Reed Hospital, was adopted last night at a meeting of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia, in the Old Union Engine House, Nineteenth and H streets northwest. Mr. Tindall was a vice president of the organization at the time of his death.

Miss Mary A. Cryder, of the Arts Club's committee, addressed the meeting and told of the funds needed to support the National Symphony Orchestra.

CAPITAL MAY HAVE OWN DRY LAW VOTE

Tydings Offers Amendment on Howell Bill Providing Referendum Here.

Washington may have a "wet" referendum all its own, if the Senate agrees to an amendment Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, tomorrow will offer to the Howell "home raid" bill.

Senate District committee consideration of the prohibition enforcement measure was postponed until 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when Chairman Arthur Capper was called out of town on a speaking engagement.

Senator Tydings thinks there ought to be a District referendum on the Howell bill before the Senate approves it. If the Senate District committee fails to accept his amendment, he will offer it from the floor.

Machinery for the referendum, which has a precedent in one proposed on the District dry law before the war by the late Senator Underwood, will be explained in detail in the amendment the Maryland senator is now drafting. Inasmuch as the various States have some say in the kind of enforcement law they prefer, he thinks sentiment in the District ought to be canvassed.

The Howell bill contains search and seizure provisions permitting issuance of warrants without evidence of sale. Senator Capper will read a report on the bill by the Attorney General at tomorrow's meeting.

Fire Official Hurt In Baltimore Crash

Washington Chauffeur Is Held on Bond After Accident.

Battalion Chief George E. Hilgeman, of the Baltimore Fire Department, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon when his automobile crashed into a Washington automobile in the downtown section of Baltimore.

According to police reports, Hilgeman's car was answering an alarm of fire when it crashed into a car belonging to Mrs. E. M. Roberts, of this city, driven by Roy E. Carter, colored chauffeur, at Parks avenue and Fayette street. Chief Hilgeman was thrown out of his car and at the South Baltimore General Hospital it was found he had several fractured ribs and possible internal injuries.

His driver, James Gable, was not injured, although the steering wheel was snapped off in his hand and he was severely shaken up. Carter was arrested and posted a collateral to appear in police court this morning to answer a charge of failure to give right of way to a fire apparatus.

Man Cycle Policeman Captured Gets 180 Days

Motorcycle Policeman V. V. Vaughn, who last Saturday drove his motorcycle through a flower bed and up against a fence, to catch Charles Penn, colored, 28 years old, saw his efforts rewarded in Police Court yesterday when Penn was given 180 days on a larceny charge.

Vaughn chased Penn from a store at 2138 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where he had stolen some clothing. In the chase Vaughn rode his machine up on the sidewalk, and when Penn leaped over a fence, the officer crashed into the fence. He was not badly hurt and he continued the chase for a block until he apprehended the man.

Man Leaves Bogus $10 Bill To Pay for Can of Shellac

If the counterfeiter who worked off a $10 phoney bill on Robert Bassford last night employs the same method every time he passes one, he won't make much profit on his money printing venture.

Bassford, attendant of a filling station at Sixth and H streets northeast, told police that a colored man, about 40 years old, dressed in a brown sweater and dark trousers, came to the station about 9:30 o'clock last night and asked for a flash light.

He was told there was none in stock and then bought a can of shellac, retail value, 20 cents. Bassford turned to go inside the station and get change. The "customer" immediately ran with the shellac. Bassford got the bill to the light and examined it. It was palpably counterfeit. It was a quirter of an inch shorter than the bills printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the quality of printing and ink was inferior.

BOARD OF EDUCATION REPORTS PROGRESS OF "CREDIT BUREAU"

Many of Teachers' Debts Adjusted Satisfactorily Under New Method.

ACTION LIKELY TODAY ON BUDGET ESTIMATES

Board May Decide Soon on Extension of Retirement Period.

The Board of Education's "credit bureau," formed several months ago when Washington merchants complained about teachers' debts, has made rapid progress, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, reported to the board yesterday.

The "credit bureau," although it is not termed such in school circles, is divided into three divisions. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, heads the division for the white schools.

Out of seven cases, he reported that five have been satisfactorily adjusted and two have promised early settlement.

Jere J. Crane, assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs, in charge of the division of custodians, laborers, &c., reported that out of six cases, two have been discharged, two will pay the debts off by degrees, one denies responsibility for the debt and one has not been paid.

Adjusted Satisfactorily.

Superintendent Wilkinson, in charge of the colored schools division, reported that out of eight cases, six have been paid, one has been satisfactorily adjusted and the judgment on the other has been set aside.

Dr. Ballou told the board it is possible that certain cases will have to be brought to the attention of the board. The superintendent submitted a report showing that teachers head the list of professions throughout the country in promptness of debt settlement.

Announcement was made that the finance committee is expected to take final action on the budget estimates for 1934 at a meeting today.

Superintendent Ballou was instructed to ask the District Commissioners to reconsider their decision to discontinue the community center department automobile service.

Extension of Period.

Possibility that the board will act on an amendment at its next meeting to extend the retirement period for teachers was given when present rules were waived in the case of Miss Rebecca E. Shanley, a teacher at Central High School.

Under the rule waiver, Miss Shanley will have the privilege of continuing to the end of May with a substitute teacher instead of to the middle of the month. The proposed amendment, which was submitted to the rules committee by Dr. Ballou, would permit all teachers to continue to the end of a month with a substitute teacher in cases where the 60-day period, in which a substitute is allowed, comes before the end of the month.

Appointment of Miss B. L. Fawcett as principal of the new Benjamin Stoddart School, Thirty-ninth and Calvert streets northwest, was approved. The new school will open today. Miss Fawcett was principal of the Randle Highlands Orr School in Anacostia. Miss F. C. Wallace becomes principal of this school.

SCHOOL GROUP ASKS SOCIOLOGY COURSE

Parents, Teachers and Officials Want Instruction in Living Extended.

Reorganization of a joint committee of parents, teachers and school officials to formulate a course of study in applied sociology in the high schools and teacher colleges was decided upon last night at a meeting of the District Public School Association.

The committee was originally organized to launch courses in biology and hygiene in the elementary and junior high schools. The committee disbanded after this was accomplished. Last night Herbert S. Wood, president of the Public School Association, was authorized to reorganize the committee.

The committee will be composed of representatives of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, school officials and the Public School Association. Efforts will be made to encourage the teaching of every phase of social relationship in the high schools, embracing community, neighborhood and married life, it was announced.

Addressing the association on the social problems of the day, Paul Benjamin, secretary of the District Social Hygiene Society, pointed out that in this present "cataclysmic and transitional period" people have difficulty in determining the right social conduct.

Mr. Benjamin, who is also executive secretary of the District employment committee, told the association of the need for Congress giving the District an appropriation of $600,000 for local relief. The association adopted a resolution indorsing the item.

Capper's Rent Bill Scored by Citizens

Central Association Votes to Oppose Measure to Cut Levies.

Claiming that apartment house owners did not realize a profit on their investment, the Central Citizens Association, at a meeting at the North Capitol Savings Bank last night, voted to oppose a bill reducing rents. The bill was introduced by Senator Arthur Capper, chairman of the Senate District committee.

The vote was taken as the result of a survey conducted by Dr. William P. Kenealy. The congressional bill would reestablish the rent commission in the event that apartment house owners do not voluntarily reduce the rental. The citizens opposed a bill which would make a plumbers' license subject to revocation and would require yearly renewals on the ground that the measure was too harsh and that the same results could be obtained by proper inspection of plumbing. The bill was intended to reduce casualties due to faulty plumbing.

Any reduction of the wages of District employes met the disapproval of the meeting, which voted to oppose any cut in local government salaries. Francis Ryan, president of the association, presided.

Traction Merger Bill Before House Monday

Eight local bills, including the pending street car merger, will be called up in the House on Monday, District Day, Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, chairman of the House District committee, announced yesterday.

Measures that will come up besides the merger include the Bowman bill for regulating security sales, the proposed board of indeterminate sentence and parole, a bill authorizing the Acacia Mutual Life Association to change its name, a bill permitting children to appear on the stage at night, and bills exempting from taxation District properties of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames and the Daughters of 1812.

S.A.R. PAYS TRIBUTE TO TWO WAR HEROES

Capt. Stephen Bloomer Balch and Lieut. Col. Uriah Forrest, two Revolutionary War heroes, were honored yesterday at their graves in Oak Hill Cemetery by the District of Columbia Society, Sons of the American Revolution, as part of their Bicentennial celebrations.

The Fourth Regiment High School Cadet Band, followed by a company of cadets from Western High School, led the procession of members from the gates of the cemetery to the graves, where wreaths of laurels were placed on both.

At the grave of Capt. Balch, John Claggett Proctor, historian of the society delivered a eulogy and the wreath was then placed by Dr. Mark F. Finley, vice president of the society. The official salute of three rounds was then fired by a detachment of soldiers from general headquarters, followed by the sounding of taps, which, when they died out over the grave were repeated by four other buglers placed at the cardinal points of the compass. The salute and blowing of taps were for both ceremonies.

A short address on Col. Forrest was delivered by Selden Marvin Ely, past president of the society. The wreath was placed on the grave by Albert D. Spengler, past president of the society.

A dinner and a business meeting was held by the society following the ceremonies at the cemetery.

Bicyclist Critically Hurt In Collision With Bus

Critical injuries were received by Joseph Piccolo, 38, of 617 Maryland avenue southwest, yesterday when he was thrown from his bicycle after it had struck a Washington-Alexandria bus at Fourteenth and B streets southwest.

The bus was operated by Roddie L. Turner, 27, of Alexandria, Va. He was held by police pending the outcome of Piccolo's injuries, but was later released under $500 bond on a reckless driving charge. The injured man was removed to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said that he was suffering from concussion of the brain and a possible fractured skull.

Boy, 12, Seriously Hurt As Tire Trips Bicycle

A loose tire on his bicycle yesterday caused Weston Ingram, 12 years old, of 344 Adams street northeast, to fall from the wheel, seriously injuring him. He was taken to Sibley Hospital with cuts on his face and arms and a brain concussion.

The accident happened as the boy was riding on the sidewalk on Rhode Island avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets northeast. Ingram was thrown to the pavement when the tire flew off the wheel. He was picked up by Harris Wood, of 32 Seventeenth street northeast, and Harvey Carpenter, of 1303 Girard street northeast, and taken to the hospital.

OPERATOR BEGAN TEST CASE TO SPEED ACTION

Court Indicates Doubt as to Validity of P. U. C. Rule Changing System.

The muddled taxicab litigation which so far has delayed the meter order of the Public Utilities Commission more than eight months, threatened to become more muddled yesterday when Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat denied a motion to dismiss a friendly test suit filed last fall in District Supreme Court.

Oddly enough, the purpose of the suit, sponsored by the Diamond Cab Co., though filed in the name of one George T. McWhorter, an operator already has been achieved in the decision of Justice Jesse C. Adkins, who held the commission order valid, but issued a stay order until August 25 to permit an appeal to the District Court of Appeals.

Sought to Prevent Delay.

The McWhorter case was instituted by taxi operators who desired to establish the validity of the order as soon as possible and thereby prevent any such delay as has actually occurred. It was based entirely on the legal question involved and was approved by counsel of the commission before it was filed.

After challenging the right of the commission to order meters on taxicabs and then declaring that if such authority existed it belonged properly to the District Commissioners, Alfred D. Smith, Diamond Cab counsel, then sat back, while William A. Roberts, special counsel for the utilities body, filed a motion to dismiss the suit on the grounds that the commission clearly had such authority.

Keech's Cause Aided.

An accident which kept Chief Justice Wheat away from his duties for some time, and more pressing matters, delayed the case until this time.

In denying Mr. Roberts' motion the chief justice indicated that there was some doubt as to the validity of the commission's authority to order taxicabs equipped with meters and that he desired to hear the case argued on its merits.

This unexpected move aids the cause of People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech and the City and Bell Cab Corporations, which appealed from the decision, and might possibly strengthen their appeal, particularly if Chief Justice Wheat should return an opposite decision to that of his associate, Justice Adkins, in the City and Bell Cab cases.

Ashes of Robert Ingersoll, Agnostic, Buried in Arlington

The ashes of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, whose agnostic views once stirred the country to a tumult of religious discussion, were buried yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

The ashes of Mrs. Ingersoll were buried with his in a grave covered with flowers. Ingersoll was a colonel of the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry during the Civil War.

Only a small group attended the services. Representative William E. Hull, of Illinois; Charles Edward Russell, Dr. Herman E. Kittredge, Representative Kent E. Meller and Senator Royal S. Copeland paid tribute to the man who gave up brilliant prospects for a career to argue for freedom of religious thought.

Mrs. Maude Ingersoll Probasco, of New York City, Ingersoll's daughter, and a few other relatives were present.
